AMERICAN SENTINEL.

WESTMINSTER, - MARYLAND.

JOS. D. BROOKS, Editor.

Entered at the Postoffice at Westminster, Md., as Second-class matter.

FRIDAY, APRIL 15, 1910.

The free traders are now advocating the repeal of the duty on wheat so that the country can be flooded with the spring wheat from Canada. Manitoba is an empire in itself and if the duty is removed the wheat grown in this country would not bring more than about 60 cents a bushel. We would suggest that the farmers of this county have a heart to heart talk with the candidates for Congress in this district. The present member is an out and out free trader and will, if given an opportunity, vote to remove the duty on Canada wheat. We stated sometime ago that the farmers had the best of the situation and we still say so. Now don't kill all of your prospects by voting to return a free trade Democrat to Congress.

Perhaps no incident in the great campaign to stamp out tuberculosis is more significant than the proposition to have the churches of the United States take a definite part by establishing a national "Tuberculosis Sunday." The very fact that a large proportion of the 33,000,000 church-going Americans will hear some truths and receive some instruction which will enable them to order their physical lives better seems to bring the subject distinctly within the province of the church. It is to be hoped that every congregation in this community will accede to the request now being made by the Maryland Association for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis and devote at least a part of one service on Sunday, April 24th, to this great, humanitarian movement.

The new charter of Westminster is now a law and we hope the citizens of of our little city will take a serious view of its affairs. We need men of ability and character. We know very well that some people look upon the offices of Mayor and Common Councilman as thankless ones but if we intend to have our affairs administered as those of private corporations are some of our business men must come forward willingly and allow the voters to elect them.

Business men who have but a small financial interest in certain private corporations, will often accept an office in the same that has nothing but honor attached to it. Every tax payer in our city has a financial as well as a civic interest in it and every one should be willing to accept, for at least one term, the responsibility of looking after its affairs. The tax rate has been gradually climbing up and if our financial and other interests are not properly guarded it will continue to climb.

Major Richard Venable of Baltimore, an ex-Confederate soldier and an old line Democrat, has written an able letter to the Baltimore Sun of April 13th, defining the difference between secession and nullification. According to the Major the Digges bills, including the proposed amendment, undertake to nullify a provision of the Constitution and not an Act of Congress. It leaves no plan for any compromise. Nullification means war, and the Act of 1795 gives the President of the United States the power to call out the whole military force of the country. Mr. Lincoln acted under the Act of 1795 at the beginning of the war of 1861. The Major further says that he can see nothing in the amendment "but the conjunction of ignorance and smart Aleck in a vacant sky; and that Governor Crothers' veto has saved some people's children's children from the wearisome task of scouring damned spots from the escutcheons of their ancestors." The Major was a gallant soldier, is an authority on law, and one of the best Jeffersonian Democrats in Maryland, all that Digges, Machen and Marbury may say about him to the coutrary not withstanding.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

In the minutes of the proceedings of the School Commissioners, published in our last issue, we find that a delegation from the neighborhood of Keysville was before the board and requested it to erect a new school house in that village. The delegation, according to the report, represented that "the present house is old, too small, and badly in need of reconstruction."

The board stated, in substance, to the delegation that it had no money to build the school house and then told it of the crowded condition existing at the West End School house in Westminster; and that it had not be able, for lack of funds, to relieve the same.

Now, we want to be thoroughly understood to be in favor of Western Maryland College receiving appropriations for educational purposes as long as it is the policy of the State to make such appropriations, but we think there must be something radically wrong with the whole system, when a public school house erected for the benefit of all the citizens of the West End of Westminster and vicinity is allowed to become over crowded, and when the tax payers of Keysville are denied a building in keeping with their actual needs, and at the same time Western Maryland College is given $16,000 to pay for the erection of new buildings, in addition to the amount given it two years ago, making the total amount $41,000.

Those in charge of our financial and public school affairs may argue until Doomsday but they will never convince the people of this county that it is right to deny the children of the masses proper school buildings and at the same time donate money to private institutions for the purpose of erecting expensive buildings.

We are proud of Western Maryland College, its officers, students and alumnii, but we do not think the people living within its shadows should be denied the neccessary school facilities while at the same time the college is being made an object of the State's beneficence.

It will be argued, of course, that the money the college receives is not paid by the people of this county and that, therefore, it is none of their business. The fact remains, however, that they are citizens and tax payers and have a right to first have their children properly housed and educated before the State is generous to private institutions. We should be just to ourselves before we are generous to others. The rule of good government is "the greatest good to the the greatest number, for the longest time," and it applies to the schools as well as to anything else the public is vitally interested in.

Reform in the public school system of Maryland is a burning question and it will not cease to be such until some very radical changes are made. It is just such conditions as we have mentioned that will eventually revolutionize the whole matter of donations to private institutions and force the legislature to wipe them out entirely.

What Conservation Means.

This is one of the most important and far reaching questions that we as a nation have to deal with, for on the proper conservation of our natural resources depends the health, happiness and prosperity of our country.

It has only been within a few years that the general public has been aroused or interested in conservation or to consider that we have any duty or interest in preserving these resources for coming generations. It is now considered that he is the great criminal of his time who robs the soil or allows any unnecessary waste whether of timber, coal or other minerals.

Conservation does not mean the smallest curtailment of benefit from our resources. It means every possible encouragement for their development and wise use. It means use in such a way as to produce "the greatest good to the greatest number for the longest time." It recognizes that to accomplish the regulation of our rivers, the forests which protect the headwaters of those rivers must be preserved. It recognizes also that the forests must be preserved to prevent the washing away of our land. The reclaiming of all productive land not only by irrigation of arid waste but by proper drainage of swamp lands. We must recognize the necessity of preserving all public lands and see that they are put to their best use. We also must recognize the great source of power formed by our rivers, and that these resources should be so developed that they will serve the greatest good to all the people and that this natural power should be kept free from monopoly. We must recognize as natural resources all materials which are available for the use of man as means of life and welfare, those on the surface of the earth as soil and streams of water, and those below the surface including all minerals. All these resources which are necessary to the life of man should be regarded as public utilities and their ownership entails certain duties to the public. Effective measure should be adopted to guard against monopoly in all these.

There are in the United States proper, according to reports, a trifle less than 3,000,000 square miles of land surface, of which a little more than one-fifth is under cultivation. About a quarter is covered with forests and a smaller poportion with forest and a smaller proportion with woods, young growth and cut over land. With the exception of waste lands and a relatively small amount of mineral lands, all the rest is grazing land.

The soils are not producing half of what they should produce or what they will soon be required to produce if we would avoid buying our foods elsewhere in the future. The acreage of cultivated land is increasing much more slowly than the population and can never be more than twice as great as at the present, while by the end of the present century we shall probably have three times as many people to feed as now. The amount of our farm crops is also increasing much more slowly than our population. An increase in yield per acre is therefore imperative. In that matter we are far behind western Europe, and as our soils are at least equally rich it becomes a matter of care in the selection of seed, of fertilizing and cultivation.

An important factor in reducing the crops yield is the loss due to injurious mammals and insects, especially the latter. It is estimated that the losses to livestock, grain and so forth, due to injurious mammals exceed one hundred million dollars annually, most of which is caused by wolves, mice and rats. The damage by birds is comparatively slight, and is far outweighed by their beneficient work in destroying noxious insects. It is estimated by the bureau of entomology that such insects inflict damages in the average year amounting to not less than six hundred and fifty million dollars upon growing corps, orchards, grain in storage, etc. Most of these losses are preventable.

The public range of the western states is estimated to be three hundred million acres in area. Upon this range it is estimated that there are fifty million cattle and forty million sheep. The range is in very bad condition, especially that part occupied by sheep, owing to over grazing and trampling. These bad conditions can be remedied by an assumption of control over the range by its owner, the United States, and the portioning out of its stock ranges individually. This asset of the country has been misused and wasted almost as criminally as the forests and minerals.

There are in this country some seventy-five or eighty million acres of swamp and overflow land, nearly all of which can and should be drained and protected and thus added to our cultivated area. It is estimated that the profit from such operations will be from one hundred to two hundred per cent over the present value of the lands plus the cost of drainage and protective works.

The Grange stands for a better system of agriculture, to increase the yield of crops and to maintain the fertility of the soil, to lessen reckless waste in any of our natural resources. This being the case, questions relating to this subject should be given a prominent part on Grange program that we may better understand the conditions and become a factor in the education and legislation along this line.

Disfranchisement Worse Than Know Nothingism.

To the Editor of the Sentinel.

The advocates of disfranchisement have offered as one of their most potent arguments that while white men are divided and vote differently, the negroes are united and all vote the one same thing, and that their unity is caused by their ignorance and their inability to learn or know anything about the policies of any of the political parties, and therefore are not competent to use the right of suffrage.

About the year 1853 on 4 the Know Nothing party came into existence and rapidly into power, and Know Nothings were soon temporary rulers of the State of Maryland; antagonizing the Catholic religion and openly proclaiming hostile feelings toward the Catholic Church. Previously very many of the most intelligent earnest and influential opponents of the Democratic party were Catholics, but when the Know Nothing party arose their self interest and religious duty drove them into the Democratic party where they all voted the one same thing; and at that time any Catholic in the State of Maryland voting otherwise, would have been a fool and unworthy of recognition in his own church. In the five or six years of the spasmodic reign of Know Nothingism there was no attempt to disfranchise Catholics because they all voted the one same thing.

The negroes, like all other men, vote for their own interest in the public welfare, and as there is here in Maryland a powerful combination to reduce their rights, that, necessarily causes them to vote solidly against their enemy, and in so doing, they prove and forcibly demonstrate their competency to prudently use the right of suffrage.

Yes, yes, yes the colored men of Maryland do vote solildy the one same thing, except that a few of their lower order do vote for the lower order of Democrats who treat them to whiskey.

The Know Nothing party was killed outright by the common sense of the people, and in like manner the mischievous minority of the Democratic party that now controls the State of Maryland will be squelched when the people more fully realize the waste of money and other harms that have been caused by the whelps.

The Digges bills are what could be expected of a legislature made up largely of such men as Beasman in the Senate and Benson in the House of Delegates.

MITTEN.—In sad but loving remembrance of my dear husband who fell asleep five years ago, March 17th, 1905.

My nearest and dearest my husband and guide,
I missed you ever since you departed my side.

If only life's path would be guarded by you.
But all to God's calling and releasing of pain,
The time shall be happy when we all meet again.
