The main speakers will be Clarence F. Huth, of Shamokin, Pa.; State President Wm. F. Williams; State Secretary, Wm. James Heaps, and others. As Camp No. 2 was in reality the mainspring of the present state camp growth, the event is one of state-wide importance. It was largely the success and energy of this camp which caused the formation of the State Camp a few years later, for it was by the direct personal efforts of the district (there were but three district presidents then), that led the National Camp to send an organizer to this state, following the institution of Camp No. 11.

Commander Vannort, of the G. A. R., of the Dept. of Md., has appointed, Mr. Winfield S. Drach, an assistant inspector and Messrs. Whitfield Stansbury and Nathan Hymiller aide-de-camp to Dept. Commander. Commander Vannort wants the several county posts to hold their annual inspection this summer, instead of in the winter. Here is what he says to them:

Post commanders of our several county posts are hereby notified that if they can make preparations for the annual inspections during the months of July and August the Department Commander will be only too glad to serve them, and he desires that they send the dates to the department inspector, James Glen, as soon as possible, so as to arrange for the inspections. It has long been a matter of grave thought how to reach all the posts during the annual inspections, and by our county posts naming a summer date when the travel can be best made, the department inspector hopes to accomplish it by and with the assistance of the post commanders.

Washington Camp No. 73, P. O. S. of A., of Hampstead this county, assisted by Camp No. 81 held memorial services in the Firemen's Hall on May 29 before a packed house of members and friends. At 3 P. Williams, Jr., and the State Secretary, Brother William James Heaps, both of Baltimore, followed by the local survivors of the Civil War, in carriages. At Firemen's Hall the line halted, and Marshals Eugene Worthington and C. Edward Lippy ushered the old soldiers and State officers through the divided line while children strewed the path of the veterans with flowers as they marched up the hall to seats in front. An interesting musical program was rendered by the local choir, followed by a strong patriotic introductory address by State President Williams, which in turn was followed by an oration by the G. A. R. by State Secretary Heaps. The State Secretary, pictured the obligations to the old soldiers and the lessons to the younger patriots in a manner not soon to be forgotten by the throng present.

A large amount of business which had accumulated since the last quarterly meeting of the grange was taken up and quickly dispatched under the skilled hand of the worthy master, Mr. Geo. A. Leister.

Congressman Joseph A. Goulden, a native of this county, but now representing a New York city Congressional district in Congress was expected to be present and make an address, but press of business at Washington prevented him from attending. He, however, sent to Michael E. Walsh, Esq., the Worthy Lecturer of the County Grange, the following letter:

May 31, 1910.

Hon. Michael E. Walsh,
Westminster, Md.

Dear Brother Walsh:

Many thanks for your very kind invitation to attend the quarterly meeting of the County Grange on June 4th, proximo. If at all possible to leave here I'll run up on the morning train, getting there about noon.

Failing to do so, will you kindly convey my hearty greetings to all those assembled on that occasion and express congratulation on the public spirit thus shown.

In this busy season, for the farmer, it proves the civic pride and devotion to our splendid order of the Brothers and Sisters of the Grange to attend the meeting. Nothing can ever be accomplished without sacrafice of time and pleasure.

All good in this world has demanded this from those who have done something for themselves and others.

The reason that the farmer has remained in the background neglected by those in charge of county, state and national governments, is the want of concentrated intelligent action. Other occupations have made giant strides to the material and mental advancement of their members by organized effort.

Thanks to the Grange and kindred farmers societies, our people have awakened to a realization of what is needed.

Permit me to call the attention of my friends to the Grangers Picnic to be held, as usual, in Ohler's Grove, Taneytown, the first week in August, and to urge you spread the good news among your neighbors.

This event has done much to advertise Carroll county and educate its good people to what is required to place the farmer, his wife and children, in the position that they are justly entitled to occupy.

The addresses made there are full of instruction and benefit, and must result in great good to our people.

Aside from this, it is desirable and beneficial to have the people of the county meet in social intercourse, thus tending to make country life pleasanter.

Wishing you and all those present a successful meeting, and with kindest regards I am

Fraternally yours,
J. A. GOULDEN.

At the conclusion of the morning session the ladies of Medford Grange, who had busied themselves with the preparation of an elegant dinner, announced that it was waiting for the delegates, friends and invited guests.

The afternoon session began at 2 o'clock. This was what is known as an "open session" and the worthy lecturer who generally presides, reserves the right to call on any one present to give his or her views &c., on any subject of interest to the grange. It had been arranged, at this meeting, to have some one deliver a lecture on the cow, and Mr. Granville H. Hibberd, a native of this county, son of Charles Hibbard of New Windsor, and a grandson of the late Granville S. Haines of Union Bridge, and now assistant professor of animal husbandry at the Maryland Agricultural College, was secured to deliver the same.

Mr. Hibberd took for his subject "The Influence of Co-operative Cow Testing Associations," and deliver a very interesting lecture. He began by saying that he was very glad to hear that the grange had been discussing the feasibility of a county fair, because the fairs offer great inducements to the young men and women of the farms to compete for the various prizes. A fair also stimulates greater interest in farm life. He said he had spent some time in Canada and that up there the boys and girls take great interest in the fairs. The first co-operative cow testing association was organized in Denmark and was composed of twelve members; that since then organizations have sprung up in many parts of this country. The object of the association is to ascertain the exact profit a dairyman receives from each cow in his herd. The idea is to have some one, who is an expert on the subject, visit the herd of each member of the association once a month and test the milk from each cow and make out a statement, in writing, for the member, giving the result of the examination as to quantity of milk, butter fat, etc., and also making suggestions to the members as to feed, treatment, advisibility of keeping or selling certain cows, etc. Mr. Hibberd said that the usual number of cows in an association was 400 and the number for any one member was 20. The expert receives a fee of one dollar per month from each member in addition to his board and lodging while testing for the member. The usual yearly compensation for the examiner is about $400 in cash. A great many students of the short course at the agricultural colleges of the country make examinations for the experience it gives them and very often practical milk men take up the work and become very proficient in it.

Mr. Hibberd had a number of charts giving the results of monthly tests made in herds belonging to various associations throughout this country and Europe. His lecture was replete with facts and was extremely interesting even to many persons present who were not milk men nor interested in the milk business.

Mr. Upton Gisdhill of the Medford Grange delivered a short address on the grange in general. He contended that our farmers should stop selling calves. They should first get the proper kind of cows to breed from and then keep the calves. He said that nearly all the cows owned in Carroll county had been brought from some other locality and in too many cases they were ones that had been disposed of by milk men for one reason or another. The same argument, he contended, applied to beef cattle. He said he knew that some years ago a certain dealer in the county bought up a lot of young beef cattle and shipped them to Virginia. The same cattle, or at least the greater part of them, later found their way back to Carroll county and that one or two farmers bought back their own cattle at a much higher price than they had received for them. He said he was thoroughly convinced that the farmers and dairymen of Carroll county were making a terrible mistake in disposing so many calves because they could get so much cash for them; that while they were getting the cash they were losing a great deal more money in the purchase of cows from a distance.

Mr. Henry Fuss of Union Bridge Grange, when asked why he had disposed of his silo, said that he had tested the milk from cows fed on ensilage and those fed on dry feed, and that the ones fed on dry feed had done as well, if not better, than the ones fed on ensilage. The maintainance and filling of a silo was costly and laborious and he had received no results which justified the extra expense and labor.

Mr. Isaac N. Stoner of Medford Grange said he had visited the farm of Mr. Albert Fuss of Worthington Valley, Baltimore county, and had examined the $1500 grain sprouting plant which Mr. Fuss installed last winter. This system of feeding contemplates the sprouting of rye, corn, wheat, oats, etc., by means of a steam process and the sprouted grain is then fed to the cattle. The sprouts are generally from 2 to 3 inches long when the grain and sprouts are fed. Mr. Stoner said that Mr. Fuss had fed 112 head of beef cattle and that by feeding the sprouted grain with an occasional feed of dry feed he had been able to put 4 lbs a day on each animal for 80 days. Mr. Stoner was evidently very much pleased with the process, but Mr. Hibberd informed him that the sprouted grain was only in its experimental stage and that the cattle fed last winter were ones which had been carefully selected at the various stock yards, with a view to testing the feasibility of the plan. The result of feeding a herd of good, bad and indifferent cattle had yet to be tried. The only persons using the system at present were wealthy fancy farmers.

The meeting adjourned at 3:15 to meet on the first Saturday in September as the guest of the Smallwood Grange.

Mr. E. O. Garner of the Taneytown Grange stated that all exhibitors at the Grangers Picnic, to be held at Taneytown in July, would be given the privileges of the grounds.

Boy Killed at Melrose.

Not only Melrose, but a general sympathy has gone out to Mr. John Albert Zepp and family, publisher and editor of the Mission Worker, Melrose, Md. On Wednesday evening as Mr. Theiret was passing the home with a cord of green wood on his wagon, Earnest, the 11 year old son of Mr. Zepp, ran to the wagon and tried to jump upon the rubber tar but missed his hold and fell, the wheel passing diagonally over his body. He jumped up and started for the home, but was caught before he fell. He was carried into the house and Dr. Zeigler called, who found his injuries quite serious and beyond medical aid. Death had claimed him for its victim and in several hours he was a corpse. In him was centered the brightest hopes of fond parents, and being brought up in the printing room at the Worker he had become quite a helper and bid fair to become master of his father's business. In the last issue of the Worker he has his first attempt of letter writing for publication, of which he was quite proud. Mr. Zepp, from a small beginning, has in 16 years brought the little Shut-In to its present size that goes out every month in the interest of Shut-Ins and Mission Workers. He and family have our heartfelt sympathy in this the dark hour of sorrow and gloom, hoping they may be able to realize the full meaning of the darkest cloud having a silver lining.
