within the classes described were withdrawn in the United States proper and in Alaska, in order to await proper legislation. Doubt arose as to the executive power to make these withdrawals, and therefore as to their legality, should they be contested in court.

The present administration continued the executive withdrawals, but suggested, as a matter of wise precaution, securing from Congress express power to make them. By Republican majorities in both houses a withdrawal bill for this purpose was enacted, and now over seventy millions of acres have been re-withdrawn of lands included within the classes described. Much of the land reserved as coal land is valuable for agriculture, and therefore Congress adopted an entirely feasible and useful plan by which the homestead laws were applied to the surface of the land, while the coal in the ground is still reserved as the property of the government.

This is a new departure in our land laws, and is highly to be commended.

IRRIGATION BONDS

$20,000,000 Voted to Secure Water for Settlers

In addition to this, it was deemed necessary, in order that certain reclamation projects of the government should be completed within a reasonable time, that an issue of $20,000,000 bonds should be authorized with which to secure water for the settlers upon government lands within the promise of the project, the bonds to be redeemed by the water rents for the service rendered. In this way hundreds of settlers who have been patiently waiting for the completion of the projects and suffering great privation will be rehabilitated.

At the same time, the law authorizing the bond issue prevents the expenditure of any of the proceeds of the bonds in any of the projects until a board of Army engineers shall report the same as worthy and feasible. Moreover, additional provision has been made in the appropriation laws for money with which to carry on surveys of unsurveyed public lands, a crying need in certain states and in Alaska.

Thus it is not too much to say that most important steps have been taken toward the proper conservation of our resources in the legislation of the present Congress. There remains to be considered and settled the question of the method of disposing of these lands so that the government may retain sufficient control to prevent a monopoly in their use and to secure the public against contortion for coal, oil, gas, phosphate or water power on the one hand, and yet may give to private capital sufficient inducement to bring about a normal development of the wealth contained in these lands to aid in the building up of the country. Neither the Democrats of theHouse nor the Democrats of the Senate as a body, although their platform declared in favor of conservation, have taken any active part or can be counted upon to assist materially in the solution of these complicated questions.

WATERWAYS

Old Piecemeal System Likely to be Changed in the Future

Another subject of pressing importance is that of the improvement of our waterways. The present Congress has enacted a rivers and harbors bill, appropriating more than $41,000,000 for the carrying out of a number of well-defined plans for the permanent improvement of rivers and harbors within a certain period, and in addition authorizing contracts to be entered into subject to future appropriations by Congress, aggregating over $10,000,000.

The bill was subject to criticism in that it still continued the old piecemeal system and appropriated something for nearly every project recommended by the Army engineers.

It is hoped and believed that in the next session and thereafter the engineers will make their recommendations, so as to indicate the projects of greater importance, so that adequate sums may be appropriated for their completion within a reasonably short time and the piecemeal policy of extending the construction of improvements of this kind indefinitely for years may be abandoned.

OTHER PLEDGES KEPT

Statehood Bill and Business Reforms in Departments

The Republican platform promised that it would admit to statehood the territories of New Mexico and Arizona, and that promise has been redeemed with suitable provisions for securing good and sane constitutions of the states by requiring their adoption in advance of the election of state officers, and their submission to Congress for consideration, and possible rejection at one of its sessions.

All this long list of useful enactments was promised in the Republican platform and has been put through by the Republican majorities.

Congress has also enacted a law, in accordance with the promise which I made as a candidate for the presidency, a bill requiring the publication by the congressional committees of detailed statements of the money received by them and the money expended by them in the political canvass of each congressional candidate.

In addition the present Congress has appropriated $100,000, to enable the executive to investigate and make recommendations as to the methods by which the cost of running the government may be reduced. I regard this last one of the most important parts of the administration's policy. I am confident that if full opportunity is given, and a Republican Congress is elected to assist, the cutting down of the national expenditures by the adoption of modern methods in doing the business of the government will reach to a point of saving many millions. How much the expenses can be curtailed it is impossible to approximate at this time. The problem before the administration is to get full value for every dollar it disburses.

The appropriations for the last year were more than $20,000,000 less than the appropriations of the year before, and in the actual execution of the law $11,000,000 was saved in the operation of the Postoffice Department, for which appropriation has already been made.

FUTURE LEGISLATION

Still Other Promises Remain to Be Fulfilled

A number of other promises remain to be kept. I have already alluded to the provisions to regulate the issue of stocks and bonds by interstate commerce railways, to which the Democratic minority in the Senate gave its solid opposition on the ground that the central government has no constitutional power to make and enforce such regulation. In addition, there is the promised procedure to determine how preliminary injunction shall issue without notice, and when.

In substitution for this the Democratic platform proposes an amendment to the existing law which would create a privileged class of lawless workmen and would seriously impair the power of the courts of equity to do justice.

Then there is the measure to promote the merchant marine engaged in foreign service, to which in previous Congresses the Democratic party has always opposed an almost solid front.

There is the measure forbidding the acquisition of stocks by one railway company in a competing line, and there are also those bills, already referred to, to secure further safety appliances on railways and to establish a basis for workmen's compensation.

There is also the promise of the Republican platform to make better provision for securing the health of the nation. The most tangible and useful form that this can take would be the establishment of a national bureau of health to include all the health agencies of the government now distributed in different departments.

Finally there is the Appalachian Forest Reserve Bill, which passed the House by a Republican majority, is on the calendar of the Senate and will probably pass at the coming session of this Congress.

CONCLUSION

Votes for Republicans Mean Progressive Legislation

In view of what the present Republican Congress has done in the fulfilmen of its promises, and in view of the standard that it has set in respect to the sacredness of party pledges, I have no hesitation in urging all who are in favor of the performance of the remaining pledges, who are in favor of progress, in favor of practical conservation, in favor of economy in government, in favor of the just regulation of railways and of interstate commerce corporations, in favor of a bureau of health, in favor of a proper limitation of the power of equitable injunction, and who are in favor of measures to promote the merchant marine engaged in foreign service, to vote for the Republican candidates for Congress in order that their wish for all this progressive legislation may be gratified.

In closing, it may not be inappropriate for me to invite your attention, and that of all those engaged in advocating the Republican cause in the coming election, to the fact that it is of the utmost importance to make this a campaign of education as to facts and to clear away the clouds of misrepresentation that have obscured the real issues and have made it difficult to secure for the Republican majorities in Congress the real credit due them from the country for the tremendous task they have accomplished. If this is brought clearly home to all voters, and especially to the young men now voting for the first time, and they become impressed, as they ought to be by this record, with the difference in the governmental efficiency and capacity of the Republican and Democratic parties, they will enroll themselves with the party of construction and progress rather than with the party of obstruction and negation, and the resulting legislation of the Sixty-second Congress will vindicate their choice.

Sincerely yours,
WILLIAM H. TAFT

SUBMERGING OF THE EGO

The "good old Kentucky variety, with the bloom on it," will doubtless long hold the palm for the happiness and finish of its execution. Not to speak of what the fine old golden Bourbon can do in these doughty days of prohibition, there is still its past record.

Back in his home city, in the blue grass empire, they love to tell some good stories of their much honored John G. Carlisle and those pleasant nights at the banquet board, illumined with his scintillant wit. Occasionally, too, the aftermath of the banquet board comes in for a share of reminiscence.

Two men of the bright coterie gathered about Senator Carlisle in those rare times will not soon be forgotten in their section—one the aristocratic and big-brained Hamilton, the other the witty and irresistible Irish counselor and orator, Hallam.

With Carlisle, they made a trio of cronies seldom matched. All lived on Garrad avenue, and to this day the older residents along that street recall with tender, reminiscent grins how gallantly the three would oft escort one another home in the hours "ayant the twal."

But one night (or morning?) there was a strange perplexity. The bell at the Carlisle residence kept ringing distractedly. Neighbors peeped out, seeing only the three familiars on the top step. Wouldn't the latchkey work?

Finally an upper window opened and the madame, never overpatient with this state of things, asked, in exasperated tones:

'What is the matter down there?"

"Mrs. Carlisle," answered Hallam, with a tongue rather less glib than was its wont, "we have brought home the Senator."

"Oh, well," she returned, impatiently, "just stand him up in the doorway and go on. I'll come and get him."

"We would gladly do it madam," rejoined the Irishman, debonairely, "only—you will have to come down and pick him out!"

Brooklyn Life

UTILITY OF BEAUTY

(Columbia (S. C.) State)

One of the chief charms in life is the sight of beautiful and agreeable things. Ugliness in any of its forms is unpleasant to contemplate, and we instinctively turn away from it. Broken fences around one's premises, an unkempt yard, a littered sidewalk, unpainted houses or an unpaved, muddy street is intolerable to the man or woman who has an eye for the beautiful. The only explanation of this is that things physically ugly grate upon and cause a discord in the soul which instinctively craves and seeks for moral harmony. God, we take it intends us all to come into relationship with all forms of beauty, and whatever produces a par and tends to throw us out of that relationship we may put down as something He did not intend in economy of His plan toward moulding us into conformity with the beautiful. From this we gather that we alone are responsible for such distortion of our nature by permitting and continuing the existence of the ugly things of life. If our environment is not what it ought to be to bring about the happiest results, such as the existence of dirty streets and sidewalks, together with ugly houses and neglected premises, we have no body to blame but ourselves. God meant us to live amid beautiful and agreeable surroundings, because through and by means of them, whether we understand and appreciate the fact or not, we develop and round out a beautiful moral character.

WHAT TREE WOULD HAVE SAID

Bishop Seymour was very fond of trees. Walking through the magnificent grounds of St. Stephens with a young lady, he talked of his trees adoringly. The young lady tried to be agreeable, and said that she loved trees also. Laying her hand on the rough side of one of the largest trees she said:

"You superb old oak, what would you say if you could only speak?"

"I can tell you," said the Bishop. "He would probably say to you: 'Miss I beg your pardon, but I'm a beech tree.'"

HIGH LIVING COST DUE TO CONGESTION.

INCREASE IN POPULATION OF CITIES LEADING CAUSE, SAYS EXPERT.

New York, Sept. 4.—That the remarkable increase in the population of the big cities of the country shown by the Thirteenth Census is one of the leading causes of the prevailing high cost of living is the declaration of Prof. Benjamin Clarke Marsh, secretary of the committee on congestion of population in New York.

"We will have to stop land speculation and eliminate the cost of transit," says Mr. Marsh in a statement on the subject, "if we wish to reduce the high cost of living, for they are two fundamental matters which make life expensive for urban dwellers.

"While the census returns show that Detroit is the leader in the rapid growth of big cities in this country, several of the boroughs in New York have excelled Detroit. The Bronx, for instance, has increased in population nearly twice as rapidly as Detroit.

"This phenomenal jump has increased the cost of living because we have concentrated in cities, particularly large cities, persons who could and should provide for themselves on a farm.

Then again our centers of production are enormous distances from our centres of consumption. We have in New York city, roughly speaking, one-eighteenth of the total population of the country. The raw material for the goods we produce is shipped here from all parts of the country and then shipped back again. Somebody pays the freight, and it is the consumer in the long run who is made to pay for the expense of shipping goods two ways.

"Another point is that we are housing the poor uneconomically. Land used for tenement dwelling houses in certain parts of New York is worth from $13 a square foot upward. If we could distribute factories and population so that toilers could walk to their work, New York could cut out $10,000,000 a year in car fares and still provide better houses than is provided today and also save billions of hours' time.'

DOGMATISM

Dogmatism could not thrive in a day where popular government is reaching out its influences in such a wide scope as the present. It needs a different atmosphere to grow in, where the mass of the people look to an acknowledged leader for their predigested mind food and people are not doing that today.

No institution, no system of mental or moral instruction or influence, needs to be more careful to avoid dogmatism than in the church and the Christian religion. In the former days, when the church set itself up in the more restricted sense as the substitute of the kingdom of God on earth, instead of drawing men into it and teaching them the true ways to righteousness, it sets up bars and barriers by its very dogmatism that kept men out of its fold and possibly discouraged their search for what the church called the "Great Truth." But this fault can be alleged against the church today only in sporadic cases. In the main it is making splendid headway toward truer, better and sounder religion.

RECIPE FOR A HAPPY MARRIAGE

The experience of a married couple who have lived together for 70 years without a quarrel possesses a practical value which outweighs any amount of theorizing and the reasons for the happy union given by Mr. and Mrs. Levi Sherwood, who enjoy this distinction, have a wide interest. "We loved each other and that was all there was to it," says Mrs. Sherwood. But the true recipe seems to be contained in the husband's remark that he "minded his own business, while she tended to her own affairs."

In that simple policy of non-interference is comprised all the philosophy not only of happy marriage, but of harmonious human relations in the broader sense. If the married adhered to this rule, there would be a little martial discord, less divorce and fewer cases of domestic disagreement in the police courts. The very latitude of action which this enlightened couple gave to each other served to unite them more closely and to avert the conflict of interests which causes shipwreck. Theirs was a union without a dictator or boss.

Veterans to Hold Reunion.

The Second Maryland Infantry United States Volunteer Association will hold its forty-eighth anniversary of the battle of Antietam.

To the decimated regiment, fresh from the battle of Bull Run, Chantilly and South Mountain, was assigned the dangerous task of carrying the stone bridge over the Antietam, defended by heavy lines of infantry, and the Washington and other artillery corps. Under a heavy flank fire they pushed on to the bridge head with the loss of 67 officers and men out of 150 who started in the charge. They did not cross the bridge, but held their ground and aided in other and successful attacks.

Gen. J. E. Duryee, who commanded the regiment in '62, has journeyed from Los Angeles, Cal., to be present. The veterans will also visit the Reno Monument in the Gap at South Mountain and will attend the reunion of the Army of the Potomac, and the dedication of the Indiana monument on the battlefield the same day.

The Second Regiment, Maryland Volunteer Infantry, was part of the First Brigade, Second Division, Ninth Army Corps, commanded by Major General A. E. Burnside.

There are a few members of this regiment left in this vicinity.

There can be no reason why any reader of this will continue to suffer the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the dangers of diabetes of any kidney ills when relief is so near at hand and the most positive proof given that they can be cured. Read what a Westminster citizen says:

C. H. Campbell, Main St., Westminster, Md., says: "I used Doan's Kidney Pills with highly satisfactory results for an attack of kidney complaint, that had bothered me for at least ten years. My back was weak and a dull pain through my kidneys. My health was much run down and I was steadily growing worse. When I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised,' I procured a box at C. W. ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

NO. 4533 EQUITY.

In the Circuit Court for Carroll County, sitting as a Court of Equity.

Estelia Fox and McClure Fox, her husband, vs. John Trayer and —— Trayer, his wife, if married, and the unknown heirs of John Trayer, if any and The Manchester Bank, a body corporate of Carroll County, State of Maryland, mortgagee of Eugene Trayer, deceased.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for a sale of certain real estate situate, lying and being principally in Carroll County and partly in Howard County, Maryland, which is described in a deed from William L. Hammond and wife to Eugene Trayer, said deed being dated April 10th, 1902, and duly recorded among the real estate records of Carroll County, Maryland, in Liber J. H. B. No. 95, folio 381, &c.

The Bill states that Eugene Trayer died intestate, seized and possessed of the real estate mentioned in the above recited deed, said real estate being situate, lying and being principally in Carroll County, Maryland, and partly in Howard County, Maryland, and that the said Eugene Trayer left surviving him no lawful decendent or decendants or no wife or widow, and that the plaintiff, Estella Fox, is a sister of the full blood of the same Eugene Trayer, deceased.

That a brother of the said Eugene Trayer, named John Trayer, left the State of Maryland many years ago and has not been heard of for a long period of time, about fifteen years, and that the complainants do not know if the said John Trayer ever married or if he left any widow surviving him, if he is dead, or any decendant or decendants as heirs at law, if so, they and their residence are unknown to the complainants; and that if the said John Trayer is living, he is a non-resident of the State of Maryland, and when last heard of was a resident of the State of Arizona.

That on the 7th day of April, 1908, the said Eugene Trayer executed a mortgage upon the said real estate to The Manchester Bank, a body corporate of the State of Maryland, having its principal office and place of business in Carroll County, Md. and which said mortgage as appears from record, is a lien upon said real estate.

The Bill further states —That the said John Trayer, if living, is above the age of twenty-one years; that the real estate described in said mentioned deed is not susceptible of partition without material loss and injury to the parties entitled to interests therein, and it will be necessary that said real estate be sold in order to make division of the same amongst the parties entitled to interests therein.

Said Bill also states.—That if the said John Trayer is dead and left surviving him any infant child or children or infant decendents of said child or children, it will be to the benefit and advantage of said infants to sell the said real estate and to invest the proceeds thereof in some productive fund for his, her or their benefit.

And the Bill prays for the following relief:—

1st. That a decree may be passed for the sale of said real estate.

2nd. That the proceeds arising from said sale may be distributed amongst the parties entitled according to their respective rights and interests.

3rd. And for general relief in the premises.

It is thereupon this 17th day of August, 1910, ordered by the Circuit Court for Carroll county, Maryland, sitting as a Court of Equity, and by the authority thereof, that the Complainants, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in said Carroll county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 19th day of September, 1910, give notice to the said absent defendants of the object and substance of this Bill, warning them to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor, on or before the 5th day of October, 1910, next to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.
