1871 July - November

living epistle written in human character on fleshly tables of the heart, - it is a setting forth again of the Gospel, the fellowship of Christ's sufferings & the power of His resurrection. You must like to think how your prayers with her & for her have brought you will be very sorry to be away from her in her hours of need, & my heart has really asked for her that she has been without the great compeller which your coming brings - but she does not murmur. On the contrary the receipt of your letters, ignorant of her loss, & telling of your experiences in travelling she receives with unmixed pleasure - she says, nothing helps her so well in bearing your absence, as to realize that you are enjoying yourself. - My dear, dearest friend - your last words to me - not meant to be the last, - were "Abide in Christ" - so may we all, through all changes of place & feeling & condition find Him a place to hide us in - just as we are. Many prayers in sincere love follow you - so do mine. I send you Eva gratefully & lovingly yours
