your return.

Give my love to your wife, and make my kind remembrance to your brother whom I should like to have entertained here, if time had permitted.

I am, My dear Friend ever affectionately Yours,

Hookfield Cottage. 1872 30 Aug.
Epsom.

My dear Friend,

The thought of your departure from London has made me sad; especially when I consider that the opportunities of enjoying your company after a journey of 3000 miles have been so brief, and that in all probability I shall see your face no more.

However I desire to be thankful for having
