"TWO WEEKS COURSE IN FRUIT GROWING

The State Horticultural Department of the Maryland Agricultural College announces a two weeks course in Practical Fruit Growing, The Control of Insect Pests and Plant Diseases and Spraying. This course is offered free and is open to all persons interested in these subjects in the State. It is an opportunity for the growers to gain an insight into the practical methods of growing trees, packing and storing fruit, and the control of the many pests that are detrimental to successful fruit growing.

This course is announced to commence January 30. The local inspectors that are employed by the State Horticultural Department to conduct inspection of orchards, etc, will be selected from the persons taking this course. It is hoped that each county will have a large number attend the College during these two weeks. The course is given at a convenient time for most persons, and the cost is simply board. Therefore, growers of this county should make use of this opportunity to learn up to date methods in successful fruit growing.

FALL STRAWBERRIES

Success with New Plants of Western New York Growers

(From the Springfield Republican)

Fruit growers, in Western New York are demonstrating that it is possible to grow strawberries until November. In fact, lucious berries are now being marketed. One of the farmers who have achieved a fine result says his berries are known as the Francis and America, seedings of the Panamerican strawberry. They were originated in Iowa.

After testing them last year this grower bought 500 plants in the spring for $100. These varieties differ from other strawberries only in that they blossom continuously from June until November. In order to get a large crop at any one time it is necessary to pinch or cut off the blossoms up to within three weeks of the time the fruit is desired. On some of his plants, this man pinched the blossoms until July 1. These plants began bearing berries July 30. On his main crop of plants the blossoms were cut off until August 1. An immense crop of ripe fruit, green berries and blossoms now covers the plants, having developed since August 1.

The first picking was made August 22 and fruit is promised until freezing weather. These plants have already afforded several pickings, three averaging more than 600 quarts to the acre. A ready market has been found at 25 cents per quart, and this grower is convinced that the average net returns from an acre of these strawberries in one year would be $1,000 or better. Ordinary spring-bearing strawberries produce one crop in two years. These varieties of strawberries produce a crop in the autumn of the same year they are planted and will bear a crop in June of the second year and continue to produce fruit from then until November. Thus instead of one crop in two years they produce three crops in two years.

HERE'S COMFORT FOR WOMEN

One Beautiful as Another, Though Men May Not Accept Doctrine

(From the New York Tribune)

Women with regular features, peaches-and-cream complexions, melting eyes and swanlike necks needn't plume themselves on their beauty any longer. They are no more beautiful than the woman with a squint and a double chin. M. Rodin, the sculptor, says so. At least he says that every human being is beautiful, one as much so as another. Nature is never, under any circumstances, ugly.

This is really very comforting, but it will be a trifle hard on the beauty doctor when women see the light as M. Rodin has, for if pimples and cross eyes are as lovely as smooth skins and straight eyes naturally his or her occupation will be gone. But think of the saving in money to husbands! Think of the heartburnings that will cease and leave sweet peace in their place when the woman who weighs 300 pounds can proudly bedeck herself and go forth, knowing that she is every whit as charming as the woman with a 22-inch waist!

The only trouble will be in getting the men to accept this doctrine. Men have a ridiculous predilection for cherry lips and a stagelike carriage. All literature proves this from Homer to the present records of the last divorce suit. The masculine mind will have to be changed considerably before a man will die for a woman with pale eyes and a number seven foot as ardently and joyously as for the other kind.

A WILLING WITNESS

"Did his actions have an air of verisimilitude?" the lawyer asked the witness.

"What was that, sir?"

"I say, did his conduct wear an air of verisimilitude?"

"Oh," replied the witness. "Sure! He was verisimilitudin' all around the place."

THE HORSE'S ANCESTOR

Skeleton of Ancient Equine About Size of Fox Terrier

(From the New York World)

The skeleton of a horse, that must have been about the size of a modern fox terrier and had four toes, has been found by an exploring party in charge of Prof. Walter Granger. The American Museum of Natural History, Seventy-seventh street and Central Park, West, recently received the news from him. This is the oldest ancestry of today's horse ever found on the American continent.

The party was sent out expressly to look up the evolution of Dobbin. A large part of the "bad lands" of Wyoming was canvassed without result. Then, in the Big Horn Valley, the discovery in equine evolution was made. It appears that this horse of several hundreds of thousands of years ago was about one and a half feet tall and resembled a hippopotamus and a tapir as much as it did the present horse. Scientists say the modern horse's hoof is not a foot, but a toe, corresponding to the middle toe of a man. The modern horse has three more toes, to be sure, but they are merely "splints," concealed beneath the skin of the leg.

In many other respects besides his abundance of toes is this little Eohippus unlike his modern descendant. His teeth are more like those of a man. The skeleton was found in the Lower Eocene formation, geologically speaking, which means that the stratum containing the skeleton was formed nearly a million of years ago. The workmen are carefully chipping out the rock bed of the skeleton. The mass will be sent to the museum, where experts will remove the bones carefully from their rocky couch, construct plaster imitations of the missing ones, and set the body up as it was when the creature roamed the prehistoric plains.

For 12 years the museum has hunted for ancestors of man's "best friend." Liberal contributions were made to the work by W. C. Whitney, Morris K. Jesup, George Gould, Frank K. Sturgis, Arthur C. James, and James R. Keene. As a result the museum now possesses 12 specimens of prehistoric horses.

VALUE OF A NAME

(Columbia (S. C.) State)

"What's in a name?" asked the daughter of the Capulets, although her after story suggests that she should have been ashamed of putting so silly a question.

Everything is in a name. To be named right is to start right. A good name is a gift. It bestows a sort of accolade upon its bearer. It knights him and sends his forth into the world to his "adventure brave and new." He must live up to it—or he will live down to it. One may conjure with "Brutus" as well as with "Caesar," seeing that the spirits will not come from the vasty deep upon our summons; but the man that, in the days of the Rubicon and Pharsalia and in later years, bore the name of "Caesar" must have felt an obligation that fired his soul as a challenge, or seared it as a brand.

But we do not here refer so much to glamour conferred upon a certain name by heroic or brilliant achievement, but solely to the name itself. Stripped of all associations, without the shred of romantic story or of tradition, the name yet stands out with its own individuality. It means something. It suggests something, for good or evil, and it can hardly fail of having some beneficent or baneful influence upon the individual or place that bears it. We expect something of a man or a city or a country that carries a noble name, and, generally, we are not disappointed.

FORMS OF LYING

(Washington Post)

A provoking form of lie is the one that cannot be denied, as when it is said of a man that he would not steal a red hot stove. The victim can only bow in silence before the soft impeachment, knowing at the same time that its promiscuous circulation does not enhance his reputation for honesty. It is in a somewhat similar vein that Mr. Dana wrote of General Hancock as being a good man, weighing 270 pounds. What could one answer to that? Though true in a way, it savors more of what Mr. Chesterton terms "the faint damns that praise" than of profound appreciation.

The man who "lies like a gentleman" is hard to determine. The sense in which it is most generally used, however, seems almost to justify the cynical assertion that society depends on appearances rather than on realities, and that the unpardonable offense consists not in doing a wrong thing, but in being found out.

The fatuous liar and the cheerful liar we have always with us, tiresome but harmless, with their vain imaginings reaching all the way from fish stories to the latest cute sayings of little Baby Bright. It is only necessary to leave them alone and they will hang themselves with the rope of their own weaving. However convincing the original statement it always breaks down under the burden of detail which the hapless prevaricator piles upon it.

TIMELY OFFER

(From the Evening Sun)

General Aguas' offer of a prize of $2,500 to the aviator at the Baltimore meet who breaks the world's altitude record, recently established at Belmont Park, is an especially graceful act, coming at a time of comparative discouragement, when the committee in charge of the meet, through the almost unprecedent weather conditions that have prevailed, has been brought face to face with obstacles that could not have been forseen. The fine spirit of courage and determination with which these obstacles have been faced will be heartened by General Aguas' gift, the aviators will be spurred to greater performances, and the meet will be a bigger success because of it.

RETIREMENT OF JUDGE HENDERSON

Rockville, Md., November 5.—(Special) The term of Judge James B. Henderson, associate Judge of this judicial circuit, composed of Frederick and Montgomery counties, expired today, he having been elected November 5, 1895, for a term of 15 years. As his commission has not been received by the clerk of the circuit court, Edward C. Peter, recently appointed by Governor Crothers to serve as judge until the election in the fall of 1911, when a judge will be chosen for the full term of fifteen years, did not subscribe to oath today, consequently there will be no judge here until the arrival of Mr. Peter's commission.

MOSTLY HALL

A New Yorker bought one of those fine old Colonial places down in Virginia, principally on account of the glowing description of the real-estate agent and on information from friends.

When he went down to see his mansion he was much impressed by the great pillars, the spacious porch, and particularly the great hall running from the front to the back of the house.

He inspected the place and came back to New York.

"What shall you name it?" he was asked.

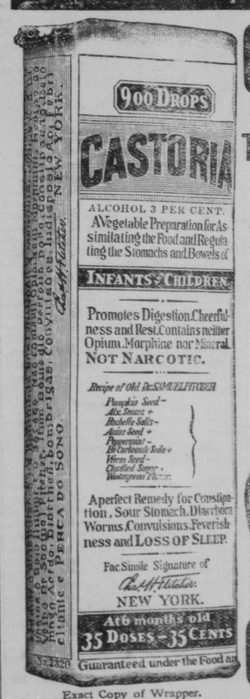

"I think," he replied, "I shall call it Mostly Hall."

MANY-SIDED McCREARY

Former Senator McCreary and former Senator Blackburn, both of Kentucky, had an argument on the stump in a certain campaign.

McCreary twitted Blackburn because he did not serve during the entire Civil War.

"I admit it," replied Blackburn; "I admit it, and I admit my honorable opponent did; but the amazement of our people has been constant ever since that he contrived to stay four years on one side of any question."

The Famous Angle Lamp

Never smokes or smells whether turned high or low. It is not merely an ordinary lamp improved. It is an entirely new method of oil lighting. For simplicity and convenience of operation it is the closest rival of gas or electricity. For splendid reading light or artistic general illumination it is the superior of either. The angle at which the flame burns throws the best light from its most brilliant surface directly downward. The effect of the light is doubled, producing a reading light with which no other system can even compare. Yet the Angle Lamp is the most economical of all lighting methods. Costs less to burn than even the ordinary lamp—fully ½ less. But call and see it or write us for full description booklet.
