SIDE TWO

again had personal intercourse with you, and I am grateful to you for your kind efforts to come and see us. I did hope to have shaken hands with you this morning, as also with your dear wife and brother; but my good careful partner would not hear of my going to Poona. Well! I shall often think of you as being engaged in warfare for our common Lord, and pressing forward to the attainment of the prize he has set before his people.

May we enjoy more constant communion with Him, and find the joy of the Lord to be our strength. There are many subjects on which I should like to have exchanged sentiments with you, but perhaps they may become the matter of future letters. I trust you will have a pleasant time during the remainder of your visit, and have the comfort of finding all whom you have left in good health on
