Dear Dr. Morris

I had been thinking very often of you and Mrs. Morris, when your welcome letter came to me, expressing such kind interest in my welfare. I am sure it was very good of you to write to me, while lying on your back. I was so sorry to hear of the accident, you met with, so soon after arriving, but I am thankful you were safe in your own home again. Indeed we were so richly blessed while absent, and so kindly dealt with in every way, that we cannot make a word of complaint, if we are one up, I cannot be sufficiently thankful. but I think sometimes he just as certainly gives one a work to do, on a sick bed, as in active life. There was a letter came from Uncle John Harris last week, and he seems much depressed, he takes such a gloomy view of his own spiritual state, his health is about as usual. How glad I should be to see you all again I hope Mr. & Mrs. Galloway Morris are well, & that Mrs. Morris' foot is improving, give them all very much love please for me, Christmas time is drawing near, our last one was spent in rather a different atmosphere from this frost and cold. but all is good in its place, hoping soon to hear of your convalescence, I am truly yours

C. Dillard
