This column edited by The Just Government League of Maryland. Headquarters corner of St. Paul and Pleasants streets, Baltimore, Md.

We are able this week to complete our report, begun last week, of the action of the California Assembly. It is as follows:

Sacremento, Cal., Feb. 2.—The Constitutional amendment providing for the submission of the question of woman suffrage to a popular vote was passed by the Assembly today, 65 to 6.

The vote in the Senate, we may remind our readers, was 35 to 5. There are therefore just eleven men in the California Legislature who are opposed, by vote, to letting the voters of the State decide this issue for themselves.

Kansas is now in the same position as California under date of Feb. 8 a despatch from Topeka is worded as follows:

The Kansas Senate this afternoon passed the resolution to submit to popular vote the amendment to the Constitution giving women the right to vote in all elections.

The vote was 27 to 12. The resolution had previously passed the House.

Do the Senate and House of the Maryland Assembly hold that their Elections are so much fouler than in these two Western States that women will be contaminated by taking part in them? Or do they hold that the women of Maryland are so inferior to their sisters in others states that the Elections will be lowered by their participation in them? It is inconceivable that the men of Maryland will admit either of these alterations through their representatives in Annapolis. What answer do the people of this state mean to require from our Assembly next winter, when the women of the state again appear there declaring that taxation without representation is tyranny, and demanding the exercise of their natural right to vote?

Advices from Seattle show that on February 8 the women voters won their spurs in that city. Lest the full significance of the election there, from the suffragists point of view, should have been overlooked we append the Evening Post's account of it, and a short editorial comment from the same paper on the event.

Seattle, Feb. 8.—Mayor Hiram C. Gill was ousted from office in the recall election yesterday and George W. Dilling, Public Welfare League candidate, was chosen by a plurality of 6,000 votes to serve as Mayor during the remainder of Gill's term.

When Gill was elected a year ago he received 18,000 votes out of 35,000 votes. Eight months after his election the women of the State of Washington were enfranchised, and to this fact is due the ending of Gill's career in office.

Of the 71,000 votes registered 22,000 were women's and a large majority of them voted for the recall of Mayor Gill. The downtown sections favored the Mayor, but the residence districts were strongly against him. Dilling got 31,000 votes, Gill 25,000, and Brown (Socialists) 4,500. The heavy Socialists vote was a surprise.

It was declared by the recall leaders that Gill and Chief Wappenstein of the police farmed out the vice privileges to a syndicate and collected a large percentage of the receipts.

As soon as it was announced last November that the woman suffrage amendment to the Constitution had been adopted, the movement to recall Mayor Gill, under a provision of the city charter, took active form, and the women entered vigorously into the campaign.

Mayor Gill's troubles began the moment he announced that he would appoint Charles Wappenstein as chief of police. Wappenstein had been dismissed from the office of chief of detectives in Cincinnati, and later had been dismissed as chief of detectives of Seattle. He had also been involved in the scandal that led to the shooting of ex-Chief Meredith in a street fight in this city. Pressure was brought to bear upon the Mayor to remove Wappenstein, and Wappenstein later sought to resign.

Editorial.

That the "recall" of the Mayor of Seattle was chiefly brought about by the votes of recently enfranchised women seems to be conceded; and the statement is made that their disapproval of Mayor Gill was based largely upon his alleged toleration of vicious resorts and his appointment of a notoriously unfit chief of police. If the facts are as stated they go to show that one of the arguments for women suffrage has some validity. It is that women will insist more strongly than men upon the moral quality in municipal administration. It would be rash to judge by a single instance; and the difficulty of making a moral issue absolutely clear to women voters might often prove as great as in the case of their husbands and sons. But there can be no doubt that the result in Seattle will be pointed to as strongly supporting one of the claims of the suffragists. The case will surely be used in the coming campaign in Kansas, the Legislature of that State having now passed a resolution submitting to the voters an amendment of the constitution conferring the ballot upon women.

This election we trust will do something towards disposing of the bogey of the influence of bad women at the polls. There could be no case where the interests of bad women could be more patiently at stake than they were here. What effect had they on the results of the election? Precisely as little as they will have in any community where there are good women. When any man is ready to say that the good and pure and true women are in the minority, or are not largely in the majority in the community in which he lives, we advise him for the sake of his family, if he has one, or of his own salvation, if he has not, to leave that community as promptly as possible and to seek another, even if he feels obliged to go as far as the Pacific cost to find it.

In the first section of the Fourteenth Amendment to that somewhat overlooked document the Constitution of the United States there is a clause which sooner or later may be found to have a bearing on the question of the voting power of women. This clause declares that "no State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunites of citizens of the United States." But it is already a privilege of the women of six states of the Union to vote in all elections. Could a woman coming from one of these states to reside in one not included in the six be lawfully deprived by that State of her privileges and immunities? The Constitution distinctly declares to the contrary in the clause above quoted. A Washington woman having completed the required term of residence, and complied with the regulations governing change of domicile, in the State of Maryland, would undoubtedly have the right to vote. In such a case merely the means to employ a lawyer in behalf of the woman citizen would have to be forthcoming.

With state after state enfranchising women in the West it is a mere question of time when such a case will arise in an Eastern State. Uniformity of State laws in all departments of justice is a demand of both political parties, in Congress and outside of Congress. It is inconceivable that there can long continue a state of affairs in which women, who enjoy all the privileges and immunities of citizenship in one State shall be altogether deprived of them in another. Another clause in the same section of the same amendment to the Constitution declares that no State "shall deny to any person, within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws." It would be difficult indeed to make this declaration square with a condition of things which permitted one woman, enfranchised in Colorado or Washington, to vote in Maryland, which a woman native to the state was not permitted to vote.

The denial of justice is like a boomerang. The injury returns upon the persons who withhold it.

STORM KILLS MANY BIRDS.

MILLIONS MAY PERISH IN PATH OF BLIZZARD.

Audubon Rescue Work Begun—Children to Save Feathered Tribe.

New York, Feb., 16.—Murderous weather conditions are now driving to death huge flocks of the song and game birds of the country, according to reports that have been received today at the headquarters of the National Association of Audubon Society in this city. Following the sweep of the recent blizzard from coast to coast, great tracts of trees and land are known to be stormlocked against the feathered life that must seek shelter and food from the natural sources that are now held in the icy grip of winter. Unless emergency measures are speedily taken to succor these birds that protect the crops from pest and furnish the game supply of the nation, ornithologists declare to-day that serious loss to the wild resources of America will result.

Careful count of the birds that perished in a similar storm six years ago over an area of southern Minnesota and northern Idaho has showed that in one night alone some 800,000 were frozen or starved to death. Many millions more are this year doomed to death in the freezing spell that has succeeded the snows of this month, the Audubon workers assert.

Calling upon the children of the land to save the storm-beleaguered birds, the Audubon organization has to-day set on foot a sweeping relief campaign in which the boys and girls of every community are being invited to join. Special pamphlets giving minute instructions for the feeding of birds under every condition of winter weather have been prepared and are being sent to volunteer bird saving brigades of youngsters in every section of the country. Through its members organizations in a score of storm bound states the National Association of Audubon Societies is urging immediate local campaigns to preserve the dying bird life of each neighborhood.

Sportmen who know the haunts and habits of the native birds are heading bands of boys, who are already setting out through the woods and fields of their home regions, equipped with shovels, picks, cord, wire and big bags of grain, suet and fat meat. At natural feeding grounds the snow is cleared from the ground and grain or bird seed scattered in sufficient quantity to tide over the storm spell all the birds that are starving in the vicinity. For the insectivrous species nourishing fat meat is carefully tied at conspicuous points in the trees along the route. Bird bread lines in each school yard and food scattered where the birds flock about every house are also recommended as a part of the Audubon emergency campaign.

"We shall exert ourselves, as we have during recent hard winters, to save the storm stricken birds of this country with every means at our disposal," said T. Gilbert Pearson, secretary of the National Association of Audubon Societies, at its headquarters, 141 Broadway, to-day. "If each American will help us in this emergency rescue campaign, I feel sure great good can be accomplished in prolonging the life of the birds that will in the new year form our only fighting force against crop plague agricultural disaster. We are raising funds and furnishing instructions with which we hope soon to materially aid the perishing birds all over the continent."

OF INTEREST TO AUTOMOBILISTS.

The Automobile Club of Maryland has issued two bulletins relating to reckless and fast running of automobiles. We think it has taken the proper steps in the matter and we are willing to give the bulletins the publicity they deserve. The following were received a few days ago by one of our citizens:

Automobile Club of Maryland.

Baltimore, Md., January 18, 1911.
Bulletin No. 39

Reported Violation of Motor Vehicle Law

Enclosed please find card for the purpose of reporting any apparent violation of the Motor Vehicle Law. It is of a convenient size and should be carried on your person, and in the event of your seeing any automobile driven recklessly on the city streets or county roads, you are urgently requested to immediately fill the card out, giving the hour, and mail same to the Secretary of the Automobile Club of Maryland, who will on receipt mail you another.

On the first offence the owner of the car will be notified.

On the second offence the matter will be turned over to the proper authorities for prosecution.

On the third offence, the proper authorities will cause application to the Automobile Commissioner to have the registration of the car cancelled.

We are determined to break up the lawlessness with which some machines are driven, and therefore appeal to you as a member of this Club and as a law abiding citizen, to bear in mind you are appointed a deputy of this Club to report these cases to us. That is all the inconvenience you will be put to; the Club will do the rest. Do it please for humanity's sake and let us put a stop to this running down of pedestrians.

Very truly yours,
Automobile Club of Maryland,
Secretary.

P. S.—The Automobile Club of Maryland wishes to thank all of those members who were kind enough to write to Maryland Congressmen regarding the Federal Registration Bill and we have to report your efforts have had some effect.

Speed in City Parks

The Park Board has recently erected a large number of signs in Druid Hill Park stating that Motor vehicles must not be driven at a greater rate of speed than twelve miles an hour ordinarily, and six miles an hour around curves.

At the trial of the test case of State vs. James S. Reese on Saturday, January 21st., Justice Robert H. Carr, Jr. decided that this regulation was ineffective, and that the State Motor Vehicle Law prevails in the city parks, as elsewhere.

Druid Hill Park and other parks being within the City, but "not thickly settled" portions thereof, the law permits a speed not in excess of eighteen miles per hour under any circumstances. Where there is traffic on the driveways, and also in approaching and making sharp turns and curves, this speed should be reduced to a reasonable extent.

In this ruling the Automobile Club of Maryland has won a great victory in favor of rational law for the Automobilists. But having won the victory, we cannot urge upon our members too strongly the necessity of keeping within the law thus laid down. If Automobilists abuse the law as it is, it will be but a short time before the law will be repealed and much harsher provisions enacted.

Remember that while the Automobile Club of Maryland stands for the enactment of fair laws, it stands even more firmly for the fair observance of laws that are fair.

Speed on Park Heights Avenue

In response to an inquiry from the Automobile Club of Maryland, the Board of Police Commissioners states that Park Heights Avenue between the Park entrance and City limits, (near Halstead's) may be classified as an "out-lying or not thickly settled" portion of the city, where a speed not in excess of eighteen miles per hour is permitted. This speed is subject to reduction where traffic conditions render such reduction necessary out of regard to the safety of others.

Again we have an instance of a reasonable interpretation of the law of the City authorities, and again we must urge upon our members the necessity of keeping within the law as thus interpreted.

For years we have been crying for a "square deal" in the matter of speed regulations. At last we are getting a "square deal" and it up to us to give the public a "square deal" in return.

Automobile Club of Maryland
Secretary.

MAY GO TO FREDERICK

Western Maryland Thought to Be in Deal

THE LOCAL RAILROAD SPENDING

$50,000 More for Terminal and Other Improvements Voted at Annual Meeting

Frederick, Md., Feb. 7.—After the annual meeting of the Frederick Railroad Company today Emory L. Coblentz, the president, announced that the Western Maryland Railroad could enter Frederick any time it wanted over his company's lines. This statement is regarded as significant, as Western Maryland interests are thought to have a great deal to do with the recent financing of this local corporation.

Surveys were made last year through the Middletown Valley, and it is generally believed the work was for a low grade coal line for the Western Maryland. That $1,500,000 has been put in to the merger of trolley and gas companies here has been done by outside help is admitted, but Mr. Coblentz says the money came from men no more interested in the Western Maryland than any other road.

The Frederick road has a traffic arrangement with the Western Maryland now to handle business by way of Thurmont, where it has a steam line that is being changed to electric for passenger business. A connection at Brunswick with the Baltimore and Ohio, by way of the trolley to Jefferson, is contemplated.

At the meeting it was announced that $50,000 would be spent on terminals, and this additional expenditure gave rise to rumors that larger railroad interests were seeking entrance to the town. Then Mr. Coblentz told of his willingness to let the nearby railroad in.

These officers and directors were elected:

President—Emory L. Coblentz.
Vice-President—Dr. F. B. Smith and H. E. Clark.
Treasurer—Thomas H. Haller.
Secretary—C. C. Waters.
Assistant Secretary—Charles H. Remsburg.

ELLICOTT CITY'S PLIGHT

The "grandfather clause" is proving even a greater boomerang in Ellicott City than it was at Annapolis. If present conditions in the town on the ter races continue, about the only outlook seems to be a receivership. And all because the Democratic leaders find it incompatible with their questionable plans to allow some fourscore colored brethren to exercise the right given them by the federal Constitution.

There will be no registration this year it is announced, because the Democratic register does not care to face a federal prison for defying the Constitution as construed by a federal court, and does not dare offend his party bosses by ignoring their desire to make use of an unconstitutional state election law in furtherance of a neat little scheme for riding rough-shod over the better element of the town's citizenship in the matter of an unpopular improvement loan. There being no registration, there can be no election, and the opponents of the machine declare they will go into court and demand that the offices of the mayor and city council be declared vacant by expiration of elective terms. As taxes are collected in Ellicott City through the corporation, such declaration of vacancy, if made, would leave the town without administrations, and it would be but a measure of self-protection for the tax-payers to obtain the appointment of a receiver for the municipal corporation pending the election of a new mayor and city council.

This is a fine mess. It is one more example of the iniquity of the "grand father clause" and all other disfranchising schemes.

duel and one less officer of the Spanish army fit for duty.

Fitz Hugh went out into the country one day and stopped at a hacienda belonging to a young widow. She being a sympathizer with the Cuban cause and Fitz Hugh being of the same mind—he was a handsome dog—she entertained him royally. They were sitting at the table, just finishing an excellent dinner, when along came marching two companies of Spanish troops. There was a major in command, and he halted his men before the gate of the hacienda and, walking up to the house, called for Senora Vendez, the owner. He was invited into the dining room, where he informed the lady that, she being an avowed revolutionist, he proposed to take her and put her in commandero, or some other spread out Spanish word, which meant she was to be penned up with other rebel Cubans. The widow, being defenseless, signified that she would go with him, when Fitz Hugh spoke up.

"Senor major," he said, "it is a very easy matter for you to commit this act of tyranny upon a woman with a battalion of men behind you, but neither you nor any man in your command could do it alone."

"What do you mean, senor?"

"I mean that if you will give me an opportunity I will defend the lady against you singly, and, after you, against any and all your officers, and, after that, against any and all your men, I to meet each adversary singly. If I put you all out of the fight the lady to remain where she is."

"Who are you, senor?"

"I am an American citizen."

"Ah! An American. We are having much trouble with you Americans exciting these Cubans to rebellion."

"You have a chance to punish one of them. Surely I cannot be expected to vanquish every man in your command."

The major swore a blue streak about interference, threatening to take Fitz Hugh along with the widow, but at this Fitz Hugh smiled, saying that only a coward would decline such a proposition as he had made. The major was the son of one of the most prominent grandees of Spain, and his ideas of chivalry would not permit him to brook the taunts Fitz Hugh heaped upon him. He went out to his command and talked excitedly with his officers for awhile, then returned with every one of them—six in all—to the house. Rejoining Fitz Hugh and the widow, he told the former that his challenge was accepted. He would fight the American first, and if he were killed or disabled the ranking captain would take his place, and so on to the junior second lieutenant.

The widow forbade Fitz Hugh to enter upon so unequal a contest, but he only smiled that imperturbable smile of his and began to get ready for the fray. Taking off his coat and vest, he went outside with the officers. The major did the same, and they squared for an encounter with swords. Fitz Hugh called to the widow to come out on the veranda and witness the tournament, assuring her that there would be no blood spilled. On this assurance she acceded to his request.

The two men had not fought five minutes before it was evident that the American could have killed his adversary five times. Then he sent the major's sword flying in a circle in the air, and it came down fifty feet away, the point sticking in the ground. The senior captain was served the same way and the junior captain also. After that it was evident there was no need for any more officers to take a hand, but every one of them insisted on a trial, and all received the same treatment. Fitz Hugh vanquished every one of the seven men without giving or receiving a scratch.

Well, the major and every one of his officers took Fitz Hugh by the hand and swore he should have been a Spaniard in the days when Spanish gentlemen settled all their differences with the sword, as all gentlemen should settle them. Then they marched away, and Fitz Hugh told the widow he would like to go back to the table and finish a bottle of wine that had been half emptied.

But Fitz Hugh had met an enemy who was capable of vanquishing him. The widow was so infatuated with him that she wouldn't let him go. He married her and is running her hacienda today.
