SALES OF A
DESIRABLE RESIDENCE
And Other Valuable
REAL ESTATE!

Located in Westminster, Carroll County, Md., and its vicinity

By virtue of a decree of the Circuit Court for Carroll county, in Equity, in cause No. 4121, the undersigned trustee will offer at public auction, at No. 230 East Main street, in the City of Westminster, on Saturday, 12th. day of AUGUST, 1911, at 3 o'clock, P. M., the following described real estate, to-wit:

1st. Four building lots on Green street, near Winchester Place, in the City of Westminster, known as lots Nos. 14, 15, 16 and 17, on plat of "Frizzell's Addition to Westminster," recorded among the Land Records of Carroll county, in Liber, J. B. B., No. 40, folio 154, &c. These lots adjoin one another and are located on the south-east side of Ralph street and the east side on Green street. Each lot has a frontage of 50 feeet on Green street with a rectangular depth of 198 feet to a public alley. Lot No. 14 is at the south-east corner of Ralph and Green streets with a frontage of 198 on Ralph street and is improved by a two story frame dwelling house, now occupied by J. Thomas Dorsey.

2nd. Three building lots on Green street, opposite said Winchester Place, known as Lots Nos. 11, 12 and 13, on the aforesaid plat. These lots adjoin one another and are located on the north-east side of Ralph street and the east side of Green street, in said City of Westminster. Each has a frontage of 50 feet on Green street with a rectangular depth of 198 feet to a public alley. Lot No. 13 is at the north-east corner of Ralph and Green streets with a frontage of 198 on Ralph street. On these lots is an excellent clay tennis court recently fixed up.

3rd. All that parcel of land called "Conover's Delight," containing 2 Acres, 2 Rods and 36 Square Perches of land, more or less, situate in said county, south-east from the said City of Westminster, fronting on the Baltimore and Reisterstown Turnpike, opposite the Fair Grounds. This is productive land, very desirably located just outside the corporate limits of said City, having city advantages but without its taxes.

Terms of sale:—One-third cash on the day of sale or upon the ratification thereof by the Court, the balance in two equal installments at six and twelve months; or all cash at purchaser's option upon ratification; deferred payments to bear interest from the day of sale and to be secured to the satisfaction of the trustee.

Taxes, &c., to be adjusted to day of sale. There will be required at the time of sale from each purchaser a deposit of $100.

CHARLES T. REIFSNIDER, JR.,
Trustee.

Also at the same time and place the undersigned as one of the owners and agent of his co-owners, will offer at public auction, the large BRICK DWELLING HOUSE and OFFICE BUILDING adjoining, situate at Nos. 230 and 232 East Main street, in the City of Westminster, being the residence and law offices of the late Charles T. Reifsnider, Esquire.

The property has a frontage of 65½ feet on Main street and 198 feet on Ralph street. The lot is rectangular in shape and runs back to a public alley. The house is large, well built and in good condition. The office adjoining the residence consists of two large rooms and has a mansard front. There are also large stable and carriage buildings upon the premises.

Possession will be given October first, 1911, to which date taxes, water rent and all charges will be adjusted.

Terms of sale:—One-third cash in 30 days from sale and the balance in cash on the first of October, 1911; deferred payments to be secured by the notes of the purchaser with securities to be approved by the undersigned.

There will be required at the time of sale from the purchaser a deposit of $200.

This property is now occupied and the occupants will very gladly show the property to any and all persons interested.

CHARLES T. REIFSNIDER,
july 14 4t Agent, &c.

THE FLOWER LADY

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

I am a globe trotter. I have visited every country on the earth, but I have had only one adventure worth telling. Being in Palermo, in the island of Sicily, I desired to visit the temple of Ceres, the mythological goddess of the crops, from whom the word cereal is derived. Sicily is still more or less in the power of the brigands, and the location of this temple is one of their operating grounds. A visit to the spot is, or was at that time, equivalent to capture by them and having to put out a goodly sum for ransom. There were several Americans at Palermo who wished to see the temple, so we made up a party to go together.

The dangerous part of the trip was a drive we were obliged to take from the end of the railroad to the temple. We telegraphed ahead to the authorities to learn whether we could not get policemen or soldiers for a guard. We received a reply that we would be taken care of.

When we reached the terminal we found that the way we were to be taken care of was this: A daring and wily brigand named Giovanni Tarantola had sent the police word that any party going to the temple of Ceres would be robbed. Tarantola always acted alone, and the police concluded to send several of what we would call plain clothes men with us, who would catch Signor Tarantola in his own trap.

All our tourists except myself backed out. The reason I stood my ground was that in all my travels I had had no marked adventure, and I needed one to liven up my accounts of places I had visited. When I reached the terminal I found a little bit of an old stagecoach, drawn by three mules, in which we were to make the journey. The paint had long ago been worn off it, all except the words Rigie Poste (royal mail), for which it had formerly been used. It held four persons inside and three outside.

Three policemen and myself occupied the inside, two of the former being dressed as women. We were all armed and ready for Tarantola. We had gone but a few leagues when our royal mail coach was stopped by a woman who wished to take passage with us.

Sicily abounds in beautiful flowers, and the woman who joined us held a large bouquet of them in her hands. It is always warm on the island, but this person said she had a bad cold and asked if any of us would object to her having the windows closed.

The Italian ladies are pretty while young, but there are many hags among the lower classes, especially those past middle age. Our passenger, though she was of large build and must have been forty years old, was not bad looking. She was bedizened with jewels and tinsel, and her face was profusely painted and powdered. Some women in Italy have very coarse voices, and this woman's was of the coarsest.

When we told her that Tarantola had sent word that he would attack any party going to visit the temple she appeared to be very much frightened. She demanded a return of the fare she had paid that she might get out. But a Sicilian never returns anything that comes into his possession except by force, and the policeman who had taken her money refused to give it up. She said she could not afford to lose it, so she remained with us.

She was very liberal with her flowers, giving each of us one and poking her bouquet constantly under our noses. I observed that the perfume was having a visable effect on the policemen, and I began to feel drowsy myself. One of the so called ladies reached out a hand to lower a window, but the woman with the flowers stopped her and, shoving her bouquet under her nostrils, held it there till the object of this attention sank back unconscious. A policeman tried to open the window, but the flower lady instead of shoving her bouquet under his nose put the muzzle of a revolver there.

The next thing I knew I heard the words, "Wake up, Senor Americano," and I was roughly shaken. Opening my eyes, I saw the flower lady smiling at me.

"Give my compliments to the chief of police on your return, and tell him that when Tarantola says he will do a thing he keeps his word. These beggarly policemen have no money to repay me for my trouble, so I shall leave them. But I must trouble you to come with me. Any attempt at resistance and you will never see your beloved land again."

He stopped the coach and drove me before him into a wood, paying no attention to the driver of the royal mail and the policeman outside, except to turn and say, "I am Tarantola." Since he covered them they did not dare to draw a weapon.

Tarantola bade me write a note instructing my bankers to send 50,000 francs in gold if I wished to live. I was obliged to have a cable message sent to New York, not having so much money abroad, so I remained a prisoner in the catacombs for a month before my ransom arrived. Tarantola treated me very well, furnishing everything for which I asked, which he could well afford to do at the price I paid. When the money arrived I bade him adieu, and he charged me not to forget his message to the police.

I delivered it with unction.

A CARD PROPOSAL

By GROVE J. GRIFFIN

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

They were sitting on the porch overlooking the ocean. Waves were rolling in, breaking and sliding the foam glistening in the sunlight upon the beach. A table stood between them, and on it a pack of cards.

"Shall I tell your fortune?" he asked.

"If you like."

He took up the cards and shuffled them. She asked him by what method he would tell her fortune, and he said he learned it from an Indian princess. The truth is he knew no fortune telling method. He intended to propose to her through the cards and to make up the process as he proceeded. He began to throw them off on to the table face up. The first turned was the two of hearts.

"You have two lovers," he said. She knew that she had three, not counting several uncertainties. He knew that he had one rival whom he feared. He went on throwing off the cards till he came to the knave of diamonds.

"That's the principal lover," he said. "He has the inside track. No one else has much of a show. He is tall, good looking and has an excellent opinion of himself. Just the man for a heart smasher. And these diamonds falling so near together indicate that he is the favorite with— Hello! The queen of hearts! That's you. The knave of diamonds and the queen of hearts are connected by a lot of small cards of the same suit, showing very plainly that there is an affair between them."

"How old is the knave of diamonds?" she asked.

"Thirty-five or thirty-six."

"Can't a younger lover be got out of the cards?"

"Well, here's the knave of clubs. He's one of the kind who uses a big stick for accomplishing anything he undertakes. Nothing suave or politic about him."

"I should think he would have a better chance than the other. I like a helter skelter kind of man; most girls do."

"Well, this knave of clubs is not exactly bad; but, on the other hand, he isn't very good. He's neither one nor the other. He adores you, though, and if it turns out that the knave of diamonds gets you the knave of clubs will have the breath knocked out of him."

"That would be too bad, wouldn't it? Who's that queen of spades you just turned?"

"That? That's a rival you have for the favor of the knave of diamonds."

"Haven't I a rival for the knave of clubs?"

She asked this in a subdued voice.

"Not a rival. He loves you alone. But these low diamonds coming in between the knave of diamonds and the queen of spades indicates that she has considerable hold upon him."

"She may have him for all I care."

"Here comes the king of hearts. He stands for your papa. Low diamonds following him so closely indicate that the knave of that suite is your father's favorite. When the queen of hearts comes out we shall see whom she favors. She's your mother, you know."

"I thought I was the queen of hearts."

"So you are! I forgot that. Well, we'll call your mother the ace of hearts. That's a good idea; the ace is the highest of its suit, and whomsoever your mother favors—you consenting—takes the trick."

"I think that whoever I favor will take the trick."

"Right you are. These clubs—the two, three and four—indicate that the knave of clubs has loved you four years. Ever since that summer at"—

She was supporting her head with her hands, her elbows resting on the table. At this point she shaded her face with her fingers, so that he saw very little of it. He couldn't very well tell her, even through the cards, that he had loved her longer than that, for he hadn't known her longer. She was waiting for him to name the place where she had met the knave of clubs, but he didn't.

"He was walking on the beach with a couple of other knaves. She was coming toward him with three other queens, walking two and two."

"I acted very silly on that occasion."

"What did you do?"

"I giggled."

"And we were trying to get up a flirtation."

"But we are getting away from the fortune telling. How could the knave of clubs have loved the queen of hearts ever since that day? There were three other queens with her."

"They were not his queens. None of them was. His queen was the queen of hearts. He loved her the moment he saw her and has never swerved from that love since."

After this they talked so low that a couple lying under the porch in the sand could hear no more. Two young men passing on the beach surprised one couple above sitting hand and hand over a table, peering into each other's eyes, and another couple underneath on the sand, who started on being caught eavesdropping.

"This place is full of chaps and girls," remarked one of the passers.

"Yes," said the other, "it's only another fellow and another girl."
