FIND THE GRAVE OF A MONSTER

The Beast May Have Been "Three Stories" High.

MOLARS SEVEN INCHES ACROSS

California Mastodon's Teeth Discovered In Earth With Trees Six Feet In Diameter Growing Above Them. Tree Trunks Had Turned to Coal.

Five gigantic teeth, which in some prehistoric period probably graced the cavernous mouth of a mastodon, predecessor of the mammoth and one of the most colossal creatures that have ever inhabited the earth, have been unearthed in the old Doggett mine on the banks of the Klamath river, near Walker, Siskiyou county, Cal. The three largest of these stupendous molars contain four cuspids each, each tooth measuring seven inches across from the first to the last cuspid and a little over six inches from the tip of the root, or that part of it which remains to the top of the center cuspid. The teeth measure four and a half inches in width. In a remarkable state of preservation, they were found in a pocket of sand and gravel eighteen feet under the surface of the earth.

A better idea of the size of the teeth may be gathered from the fact that they are about fifteen times the size of the tooth of the modern horse and about eight times the size of the molar of the lion or tiger. The size of the jaw of this giant creature may be imagined, therefore, to have been eight to ten times the size of that of the lion or tiger and about fifteen times the size of a horse's mouth.

That the teeth were those of an herbivorous animal seems evident from their evenness. They are too large to have belonged to the mammoth. This would seem to indicate that they belonged to the mastodon, which towered in size over the mammoth as that creature did over the modern elephant.

There Were Men Then Too.

Close to the teeth was found an ancient stone hatchet which is believed to belong to a period coexistent with that in which the animal to which the teeth belonged is believed to have lived. Indians of the Klamath river tribes on being shown the hatchet declared that they had never seen or heard of anything resembling it, and the medicine men and chiefs stated that the traditions of their people contained no account to show that the hatchet had ever been made or used by them.

In the same pocket where the teeth were found was a horn seven and a half feet long, which crumbled in the hands of the shovelmen when they attempted to take it up. The horn measured at the butt fourteen inches in diameter, but it bore no resemblance to the horn of the prehistoric mammoth. The horn was of the same contour as that of ordinary cattle and contained a core and a thin shell similar to that of the ox.

These relics were found in a stratum of earth which bears evidence of being the ancient channel of the Klamath or some other river from which the Klamath was evolved. The spot is fully 200 feet from the present bed of the river, but runs about parallel to the present channel.

Laid There 10,000 Years.

The general formation of the earth gives every indication of having been massed ages and ages ago, and from the trees and the partly petrified trunks of trees which were found at bedrock twelve feet under where the relics were unearthed there is every reason to believe that the teeth had lain imbedded where they were found upward of 10,000 years ago.

The enamel of the teeth is in a splendid state of preservation and is green in color. On the tip of several of the cuspids are cavites such as might be found in the teeth of an ordinary animal. Savants at the University of California are to be asked to try to fix the identity of the creature that possessed the teeth.

OPERATION CURED A HEN.

The Owner of Pet Fowl Took Her to a Veterinary.

Dr. Craig Schreiber, an interne at a St. Joseph (Mo.) veterinary hospital, has been advised that a pet Plymouth Rock hen belonging to Edward L. Kieffer, on which Schreiber operated, has recovered from the shock and is again eating a continuous daylight meal.

Recently the hen's craw swelled until she obviously was distressed. Kieffer took her to the veterinary hospital. There Dr. Schreiber, without anaesthetics, made an incision in the craw and removed about a quart of grass, corn grit and other substances.

"We found the inner lining of the craw ruptured so there could be no contraction of the organ to force the food through the proper channels," Dr. Schreiber said. "After they had been antiseptically cleansed the walls of the craw were drawn together and sewed."

A Well Drawn Distinction.

Professor Brander Matthews, in an address at Columbia university, once made a striking distinction between the two words gormand and gourmet.

"The difference between these two words," he said, "is plain.

"Gormand and gourmet alike enjoy a good dinner, but as soon as it is over the gormand asks:

"'What is there for supper?'"

DIDN'T SPEAK TO HIS WIFE FOR FORTY YEARS.

Ruland Lived Next Door to Her, but Never Forgave Scandal.

Gilson Ruland ever since he returned to his home in Patchogue, N. Y., from the civil war in 1865 had lived in a house adjoining that of his wife and never in forty years had spoken a word to her. Ruland died recently. He was ninety-one years old and at the time of his death had not a friend or relative in the world, his wife having died some time previously, from grief, it is believed, because he would not be reconciled with her.

Ruland married shortly before the civil war. He enlisted at the first call for volunteers. When he returned, four years later, gossiping residents of Patchogue were linking the name of his wife with those of other men who had not gone to the war.

From the day he returned and first heard the stories Ruland never again addressed a word to his wife. He left the house in which he and she had been living before the war and built himself a house next door. It was small, with only two rooms, and he lived there alone. He and his wife often passed each other in the street and lived so near that they could not help seeing each other through the windows of their homes. She made many fruitless attempts to win his forgiveness.

Ruland was known to two generations of children as "Santa Claus" because of his long white beard.

FAVORS BIG GUNS FOR PEACE.

Lord Beresford Scouts the Idea of a British-German War.

The peace of Europe is best maintained by big navies is the opinion of Lord Charles Beresford, who is visiting this country.

It was in reply to a question regarding the makeup of the British navy that Lord Charles Beresford gave his opinion.

"I do not think it is arrogance to say that the peace of Europe depends largely upon the strength of the British fleet," he said. "Peace is for the interest of all and is the greatest interest the powers of the world have to consider.

"The idea of war between England and Germany is ridiculous. Diplomacy will always prevail to prevent such a thing."

Asked about the veto bill, he said the reform of the house of lords was a necessary step to meet modern requirements. He added without comment that the house of lords will have to be distinctly reformed. He was asked which was the greater fighting ship, our new Delaware or the British Dreadnought.

"That is a question of patriotism," he answered diplomatically.

Lord Beresford is going to the Pacific coast and then to Mexico, where he has property.

A HOLE AS EVIDENCE.

Unusual Exhibit Will Figure In the Trial of the McNamaras.

A hole in the ground caused by the explosion of a bomb will figure in the trial of the McNamara brothers for the alleged dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times. The hole was dug up and boxed for preservation.

On the morning of the destruction of the Times building, Oct. 1, 1910, two unexploded bombs were found at the residences of General Otis, owner of the Times, and F. J. Zeehandelaar, secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers' association. A detective was carrying off the bomb from the Otis grounds inclosed in a suit case when he heard a clock ticking and dropped the grip and ran. The bomb went off, tearing a large hole in the ground.

The hole remained undisturbed, but a few days ago the attorneys for the defense decided they needed it for evidence. Accordingly four detectives set to work and by daybreak had tunneled under the hole, boxed it in and prepared to cart it away.

INVITE TAFT TO FLY.

Harvard Aviators Will Give Him Chance if He'll Take It.

President Taft will have an opportunity to take an airship ride at the air meet at Boston, which begins Aug. 27.

Officials of the Harvard Aviation association have decided to present an invitation to the president to take his first trip into the air on the day that he visits the flying exhibition.

The president has already promised that he will go from Beverly on one of the flying days.

Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston, who went up last year, will go up again this year. If possible Mayor Fitzgerald will take his next trip on the day that the president attends the meet, and an appeal will be made to the president not to let Boston's chief executive outdo him.

ANSWER IT HONESTLY.

Are the Statements of Westminster Citizens Not More Reliable Than Those of Utter Strangers.

This is a vital question.
It is fraught with interest to Westminster.
It permits of only one answer.
It cannot be evaded or ignored.
A Westminster citizen speaks here,
Speaks for the welfare of Westminster.
A citizen's statement is reliable.
An utter stranger's doubtful.

James F. Rinker, Justice of the Peace, E. Main street, Westminster, Md., says: I willingly confirm all I said in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills in the public statement I gave in 1907. I suffered for some time with kidney and bladder trouble, brought on by a cold. My back ached intensely and I felt miserable in every way. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Moore's Drug Store, gave me entire relief. I consider them an excellent rmdy.
