The Democratic ring stands convicted. The sentence will be pronounced November 7th.

The disfranchising amendment is bad, very bad, and should be defeated. Don't fail to vote against it.

The campaign is getting warmer. This is the time of the year for politics and pumpkin pies. Get on the right side—the Republican side.

Look for the sample ballot in this issue. It is one of the largest ballots we have ever had and will take careful folding to prevent the loss of your vote.

The tariff has got nothing to do with this fight. The people of this state are going to do some Fall housecleaning. The national questions will receive attention later. Get on the winning side—the Republican side.

Mr. A. P. Gorman, the Democratic candidate for Governor does not shake hands when introduced to anyone. He simply bows. The people of Maryland will bow him out of public life November 7, 1911.

The two amendments providing for increase representation for Baltimore city in the legislature are cunningly drawn. The first one provides for an increase in the membership in the lower house and the second for an increase in the upper one. The framers thought they would take chances in getting at least one of them through. Both should be killed. Don't fail to vote against them. It takes two crosses.

NO OVER CONFIDENCE.

The campaign of 1911 in Maryland now hurrying to a close will go down in history as one of the most—if not most remarkable political contest of modern times. Almost from the very outset it has been exceptional, unique we may say, because of the many unusual elements, the peculiarly forceful issues, and the highly sensational incidents that have characterized the daily progress of the canvass not to mention the admirable fitness and qualifications of the candidates on the one side, and the unpopularity of the nominees and what they represent, on the other. It is doubtful if the Republican party in this State, even in the memorable campaign of 1895, has ever before been so high in public favor as it is this year, or that the Democratic party, it may be added en passant, so generally abhorred and discredited.

With the unanimous nomination of gentlemen of the highest type of personal integrity and official competency; with the promulgation of a platform extraordinary for its lofty ideals and stirring principles, and with united forces throughout the State, the Republicans in Maryland were well equipped for the fray. And to all the attractiveness of its candidates and resolutions there had been accorded to the Republican party the further advantage of a divided Democracy; of ring-chosen opposing candidates; of a machine-made platform adopted for the convenience of the occasion; of a gubernational nominee with an official record of despotic dictatorship, discarded principles, and prodigal extravagances with public funds rarely, if ever, equaled, and assuredly never excelled in the annals of this or any other state in the Union, in ratio of population, wealth and importance. Surely this was a situation entirely satisfactory to the most exacting Republican partisan.

But as if all this were not enough to fill the Republican breast with assurance and hope, and the Democratic heart with a corresponding degree of anxiety and despair, there came, first, the charges of corruption, ballot-box stuffing, vote-juggling and falsification of the returns in the primary, and, second, the proof and preponderance of evidence of guilt of Democratic election officials and all the shocking discoveries and disclosures of fraud day after day ever since, followed by the flood of indignation that has swept through the State from one end to the other and leaving the Democratic candidates and the party "leaders" wholly discomfitted and grabbing at straws to save them from deluge.

It would seem, viewing from the situation from every angle, that there can be but one result—but one outcome of all this, and that a veritable landslide to the Republican ticket with an overwhelming and ignominious defeat for the Democratic bosses and their candidates. And herein lies the real weakness of the Republican cause and the one hope of the Democratic managers as far as can now be forseen—over-confidence. The Democrats are relying almost entirely upon the possibility of a relaxation among Republican fighters—a let-up in the bombardment and onslaught that will enable them to find an opening in an unguarded moment when some prearranged scheme or plan may be put into successful operation.

They are hoping, too, that the Republicans will become so certain of a decisive victory that many of them will remain away from the polls on election day, or neglect, or fail, to perform some other no less-important individual duty between now and the 7th of November that will mean the loss of a few votes here and there, in themselves of little consequence, but in the aggregate of great significance and of vital importance to them, because fatal to the cause of their formidable opponents. The manner in which the votes were moved about in the primary frauds uncovered by the Baltimore Grand Jury—a few in one precinct and a few in another, yet not many in any particular one—demonstrates the method with which the Democratic bosses work. They proceed with system and decorum and patience withal.

Let no Republican nowhere, however small his precinct, whatever his influence with his fellow townsmen and his neighbors may be—little or much—let no one who is interested in the result of this campaign, and who hopes for the overthrow of the Democratic machine, conclude from the resents rays of the smiling sun of success that the battle has been fought and the victory already won. Let no good citizen who longs for better things in governmental affairs of his beloved State deceive himself into the belief that Republican success is assured beyond all peradventure, come what may. If any have so erroneously concluded, and are sitting by with folded hands well satisfied with conditions as they are and awaiting in idleness the result of the election with confident anticipation, let them arouse themselves and get back into the very thickest of the fight. There is still very much work to do for every citizen and voter—every Republican, Independent and machine-weary Democrat. Not only is there work to do now, but there will be a great deal of genuinely hard work to be done until the polls are closed on the evening of election day.

At Republican headquarters and among the party leaders and managers of this campaign nothing is being taken for granted and every man is hard at it day and night, with the same energy and zeal, and with the same earnestness and enthusiasm as when the contest opened, before the clouds began to break, when all was dark and drear, when the path of duty was steep and rugged They are working harder than ever before, if this be possible. They know the power, the persistence, the resourcefulness, the cunning of their adversary, and they are alert, watchful, active, and will be found fighting on to the very last.

Chairman Hanna and his corps of able helpers, have studied the situation well. They have canvassed the conditions as they exist today with thoroughness and circumspection; and while sending a message of encouragement and good cheer to the rank and file throughout the State, they also send a word of warning and caution. Next to some new trick or scheme of the Democratic pastmasters in the game at the last moment, the Republican leaders fear overconfidence in their own ranks, and urge upon the workers in every precinct in the State the importance of keeping up the fighting to the very last moment.

Fight, fight, all along the line, every hour of the remainder of the campaign. If you have fought hard before, fight harder from now on. The vote for the Republican candidates must be very large to win at all, and the larger the vote, the harder and more persistent the work, the greater will be the victory, the brighter will be the victory, the brighter will be the glory.

Push the fighting everywhere,
Keep up the campfire's ruddy glare.

CURTIS BAY OUTRAGE.

Next to the corruption, vote-juggling, repeating, and almost every other form of election fraud known to the practiced ballot trickster brought to light by the Baltimore City Grand Jury investigation, the high-handed methods employed by the registration officers in Anne Arundel county quite recently have shocked the sensibilities of the fair-minded men throughout the State more than anything that has transpired for may a long day, and have furnished additional evidence of the really vicious and unwarranted procedure practiced by Democratic election officials to gain a point for themselves or prevent the Republicans from obtaining anything approaching in the slightest degree a square deal.

The Curtis Bay incident has all the elements of darklantern-jimmy-and-sandbag fiction in the most hair-raising detective stories of the time. Two citizens, while in the performance of a civic duty, peaceably and well within their legal rights, were set upon by the Democratic registration officers, bullyragged into an argument, ordered to leave the room and when they hesitated or refused to go, were arrested, thrown into a dingy lock-up, refused food and drink and the use of the telephone through which to communicate with their friends, and were later handcuffed like common felons, dragged through Baltimore en route to Annapolis, where they finally obtained a hearing and were released on bail, to be later, of course, discharged and vindicated by a court of proper jurisdiction and unprejudiced temperament.

And all this because, forsooth, they had the temerity, the hardihood, mark you, to ask the Democratic registration officers to permit them to file a list of 180 names of voters who were suspected of being erroneously registered in that precinct, and who ought to be, therefore, stricken from the poll-books before election day. That was the whole of their offending. Briefly, the story is this :

At the first sitting of the registration officers in the 3rd precinct of the fifth district in Anne Arundel county, which is the Curtis Bay district, better known as "Jack" Flood's precinct—almost everybody has heard of "Floods" resort and knows something of its character and the sort of people who visit it—at the first sitting of the registration officers William E. Cecil, independent candidate for sheriff; James P. Bannon, a well-known citizen, and Philip Morgan, a resident of Glenburnie and a member of the last grand jury, all residents of Anne Arundel county and all Democrats—these three gentlemen and citizens called at the registration office at Curtis Bay on Tuesday evening, October 3rd, and endeavored to persuade the registraton officers, also Democrats, to permit them to file a "suspect list" of 180 names which they had investigated, and, as a result of that investigation, had concluded ought to be stricken from the poll-books. On this occasion the registration officers engaged the gentlemen in argument, and managed to prolong the discussion until the time to close the registration office came around, so nothing was done.

On the following Tuesday, October 10th, however, determined to attend to this important matter in good time, the gentlemen appeared again before the Curtis Bay registration officers with their list of "suspects," this time at 9 a. m. On this occasion Mr. Cecil and Mr. Bannon came, and Mr. Cecil had brought J. Holmes Hughes, a Baltimore attorney, with him as his counsel. Immediately the registration officers objected to the presence of Mr. Johnson, the lawyer, and when he declined to obey their mandate to get out, he was first ejected from the room and then arrested by order of the Democratic registration officers, although they were told that the law gave the attorney the right to be there. In the meantime Mr. Morgan arrived, and, being asked his business there, stated that, being a citizen and voter of the county, he had a right to be there, and further that he desired to assist in purging the list of illegal voters. The registration officers declared they did not know Morgan, and he, too was promptly arrested and locked up. Morgan was to have vouched for the correctness of Cecil's list, and both had offered to swear to the names either separately or collectively as the registrars might require. The registration officers explained to Mr. Bannon, who protested against such high-handed proceedings, that they themselves had made up a list of suspects containing 30 names which they intended to use instead of the list of 180, submitted by these gentlemen.

Bannon endeavored to show the registrars that Morgan is a legal voter but to no purpose. He then asked on what charge Johnson and Morgan had been arrested, but this information was refused as was also his request that he be allowed to confor them in the capacity of counsel. And when the deputy sheriff put the handcuffs on the prisoners, Bannon again protested, but Magistrate Potee, ordered the deputy to "give them what is coming to them." When it is known that Morgan is a medium-size man and Johnson is slender, short and weighs not more than 100 pounds, the necessity of taking the precaution against their escape by handcuffing them will at once be apporent to all.

They were then chained together like common felons, brought through Baltimore to Annapolis—we were about to say to be hanged. Arriving there, happily, they secured a lawyer and a drink of water, both of which had been denied them from the time of thir arrest. Judge Brashears, before whom they were at once taken, admitted them to $200 bail and the following Friday morning, when the men were given a hearing on habeas corpus proceedings, the State's Attorney asked that they be dismissed, and Judge Brashears took occasion to refer to the proceeding in vigorous language, declaring the men to be well within their legal rights in the performance of a commendable public duty; he also intimated that other proceedings would follow. He denounced their arrest as wholly unwarranted and unjustifiable.

It developed that these same registration officers had been before Judge Brashears a year ago for refusing to accept a suspect list, but had been allowed to go on their plea that they did not know that there was such a law; but they will hardly be able to offer this excuse as a defense in this instance. It also comes about that the registration officers the sheriff and the committing magistrate in the case are all members of the notorious political gang known as the Revell-Potee-Wells machine.

Has the Democratic party not yet provided sufficient evidence to convince the better element of citizens and voters of all classes in every section of Maryland that to longer retain in power that party as at present constituted and controlled will mean the thorough and absolute degradation of the ballot and the utter disregard of every voter and citizen when it comes to elections ?

Aren't the people yet convinced that the only way to prevent the Baltimore Democratic machine with "Sonny" Mahon at the head from extending its control from the City through the entire State—isn't the only way to bring about a new and better and cleaner order of things to elect the entire Republican ticket ?

Vote for Goldsborough and pure and honest elecitions, and see that your neighbor does so, too.

Mrs. Ella C. Study, who had been visiting relatives around here has returned to Owings Mills

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Eckard spent from Saturday until Monday with Mr. and Mrs. John L. Eckard, of Hoffmanville, Baltimore county. While there they attended a surprise party given in honor of Mrs. Frank Lawson, it being the latter's 38th birthday.

Miss Ada Gelman, who had been so seriously ill this summer, was taken to the Woman's Hospital, Baltimore, to undergo an operation.

Some of our people who attended the Frederick Fair last week, seem to have had hard luck. Instead of taking a train for Westminster they got to Taneytown, while their teams were in Westminster. They walked as far as Tyrone and hired some one to take them to town for their teams. One of the crowd walked straight through to Pleasant Valley, reaching here about 7 a. m.—and without a hat.

Mr. Joseph P. Yingling has put down over 1100 square feet of cement pavement which is a big improvement to the town. Mr. John L. Lawyer, of Littlestown, and Mr. Sterling Lawyer, of Union Mills, are doing the work. Let the good work go on

Mr. Martin L. Helwig has just completed a fine cement walk around his house which adds greatly to the appearance of the place. Mr. Joseph Hahn did the work.

MELROSE.

Among the improvements made in town are the following : Messrs. Jacob Berwager and F. T. Crumrine, residences repainted; Mr. J. A. Zepp, an 18 by 18 addition to Mission Worker Building, and a number of our citizens are laying concrete walks.

The teachers of our schools are meeting with success. Mr. C. J. Sauble, Wentz's; Miss Anna Crumrine, of Krider's; Mr. Theo. Myers, of Ebbvale; Mr. Bertram Strevig, of Bachman's; Mr. H. T. Wentz, of Tracy's, and Mr. E. W. Burgoon, of Mt. Vertus are all doing well with their schools.

Miss Mary Adams, of Hanover, and Mr. James Beck, of York, Pa., were guests of Miss Anna M. Crumrine.

NEW WINDSOR.

Mrs. Julia Roop and Mrs. Mollie Selby are visiting at Waynesboro, Pa.

Mrs. Joshua Smith entertained the Mite Society at her home, near town, Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Ratte moved to Dr. Helm's house ,this week.

Dr. A. E. Lambert is putting down a concrete pavement in front of his new house.

Charles W. Smith, our jeweler, and Mrs. Augustus Kipp, of Waynesboro, Pa., were married October 18th, at Chambersburg, Pa., by Rev. F. L. Bergstresser, pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church, of Chambersburg, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Smith will occupy Mr. Smith's house, vacated by his son, after the first of November.

Cactus Telephone Poles.

Scientific American.

According to a recent press report, the government is about to build a telephone from Tucson, Arizona, into the Catalinas, for the forestry service. The building of the line will be rather difficult, owing to the rocky nature of the country, which will make it impossible in some places to set wooden poles of the ordinary type. It has been proposd that in the canyons the cacti growing along the line be used. Brackets will be fastened to the cacti, and the wires will be supported on the brackets in the usual way. This type of pole may be adopted wherever cactus grows along the line, provided it does not require too much zigzagging.

CHILDEN TO GUARD BIRDS.

Young Army Will be Rallied by Teachers—New Motive at Annual Audubon Meeting—Boys and Girls Eager.

New York, October 19th.—To enlist every American boy and girl in an army of young bird guards that may number millions, a conference of teachers from many parts of this country has today been called in connection with the annual meeting of the National Association of Audubon Societies on October 31st in this city. Men and women representatives of the school workers have offered personally to attend this gathering, while many others are sending in their support and suggestions for lining up their young charges to study nature and fight for the protection of the native birds. An advance guard of 10,000 children in the southern states has already been formed for this purpose by some six hundred teachers, and with the support of the schools and the necessary fighting funds, the Audubon workers hope to establish forces of thousands more in every section of the United States.

As ammunition for the proposed child host, millions of pamphlets telling of the habits and uses of American birds will be sent out from Audubon headquarters here. Armed with these and drilled in the study of nature, the boys and girls are to skirmish over their home country, feeding and providing shelter for the starving birds in winter and guarding them from thoughtless destruction by pot hunters. In the training that it is intended to thus give the youngsters of every locality, educational authorities are today declaring that splendid results in the development of young minds and faculties can be obtained.

In Texas, Louisana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, Mississippi, Georgia, Alabama, Maryland and the Carolinas the ten regiments of children already enrolled on the proposed basis of the Junior Audubon Army are proudly wearing handsome buttons and are well drilled in the 200,000 nature study leaflets that have been sent them with this insignia from Audubon headquarters here. Each private in the little army has paid in a cent a month with which some of the expenses of the quartermaster's department are met. Special funds to maintain and extend such a child force throughout the country are now being raised by the Audubon workers, who assert that no branch of their work will yield better results for bird protection.

The chief hope of saving the valuable and beautiful birds for this nation lies in the children who form the coming generation, said T. Gilbert Pearson, Secretary of the National Association of Audubon Societies, at its headquarters, 1974 Broadway, in the city today. "Though our annual meeting will show increased adult membership and work in many other fields of bird protection, we believe the rally of our new army of children will mark the start of a most effective line of activity. The boys and girls are eager to help, and the idea is being taken up with enthusiasm by teachers everywhre."

ELECTRICITY.

Experiment in Purchasing Electricity
Scientific American.

The work of electrifying the lines from Lauban to Konigszelt is soon to be begun. The current for these lines will be bought from commercial electric power stations, instead of being supplied by a power station built by the railroad itself. The decision to purchase power was made in order to determine whether this would be a cheaper way of operating the line than if the power were generated by a station built especially for the railroad.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving remembrance of my dear mother, who departed this life one year ago, October 26, 1910.

O, the memory of that morning,
As we stood with aching hearts,
Seeing the one we loved so dearly,
Pierced by death's most cruel dart.
Lovingly and tenderly we laid her to rest,
Away from earth's sorrow and care,
And now she is waiting to welcome us home,
And the blessing of Heaven to share.
