0399

1874 January-May Cooper Morris Incoming Letters #44

SIDE ONE

might largely spread their views, but as the proposal was at once accepted by all the others, the result has, I think, been a large gain to the cause of Evangelical truth. So pleased have many been with it, that it will probably have it repeated another year. Do you know any thing of Mr. Pearsall Smith and his wife. They have been in England for a twelvemonth past, and have excited a good deal of attention by preaching perfection, or the higher as they term it, a higher spiritual life. Mr. Pearsall Smith's views and Mr Boardman's have called forth a good deal of controversy, and the former has retracted some of his theory

18 May 1874

4, Gloucester Square,
Hyde Park, W.

My dear Friend,

I fear I have been very lisent in not replying earlier to your last letter. It seems long since I heard from you. I trust your hours have been favoured with health. Last autumn my wife and I and one of our daughters made a little tour to Oxford, Worcester and Malvern Bath. We stayed some days at ~~Bath~~ Malvern, and I think the air of that place and perhaps the waters were beneficial to us all: and I have passed the winter with less discomfort than for some years past. our