ANNAPOLIS NEWS

Charged With Violating Local Option Law—Score Of Other Arrests Expected.

Annapolis.—Five men are in the county jail here awaiting a hearing, and warrants are out for the arrest of a score of others as the result of a quiet but systematic crusade carried on by the Anne Arundel county authorities for several weeks to stamp out the sale of liquor in local option sections of the county. The men now locked up are:

Charles Boyd, of South Stricker street, Baltimore.
Charles W. Houck.
Jesse Conway.
Charles Lessner.
Frank Hess.

Four of the prisoners live in the district of the county in which the violations are alleged to have occurred. Despite the fact that this is prohibition territory under the local law, it has been known for several years that 30 or more persons, particularly those having resorts along the shore of the Magothy river, have been selling intoxicants under Federal licenses. Attention of the county authorities had been called to the situation repeatedly, but somehow only a few offenders have been brought to justice. Now, however, it is understood that State's Attorney N. H. Green and Sheriff George T. Beasley have gathered much evidence against the alleged speakeasies and that wholesale arrests will follow.

James P. Bannon, an attorney and at one time prominent in Democratic politics in the county, is said to be prominent in the present crusade. He and two detectives hired by him are alleged to have furnished much of the evidence against the proprietors of places for whom warrants have been issued. Mr. Bannon's deep interest is not understood, except that he is said to be working in behalf of the Anti-Saloon League.

Blows Concrete On Walls.

Annapolis.—There is being tested at the Naval Academy a new scheme in the line of semi-concrete construction on the success of which will depend its adoption by the Navy Department for use in general purposes at naval stations throughout the country.

The test is that of the use of a blowing machine by which a concrete surfacing may be given to walls of buildings, and, judging from appearances so far as the work has progressed, the test has been highly satisfactory.

To carry out the experiment the nine-foot wall that incloses the main portion of the Government reservation is being used and the ultimate result, it is expected, will be a decided improvement compared to its former appearance. This wall, long since weather-beaten, painted and repainted in a dull gray, only for the paint to gradually peel off, had become unsightly as an inclosure for the fine, new buildings.

The blowing machine is operated in connection with a high-pressure gasoline engine, which forces sand on cement through a tube.

SHOCKED TO DEATH

LIVE WIRE KILLS FIRE CAPTAIN FIGHTING FLAME 120 FEET IN THE AIR.

LANTERN COMPLETES CIRCUIT

He and Companions Flung Down to Platform—Three Thousand Persons in Street in Tumult Until Rescues Are Effected.

Atlantic City, July 18.—Capt. Edward Barnett of the Central fire station was instantly killed, George Profatt, Chief of the City Electric Bureau, was knocked unconscious and a score of firemen were shocked at ten o'clock at night when a lantern in Barnett's hand completed a circuit and sent 5,700 volts from an arc light circuit through his body and into the metal trimmings of the City Hall tower, 120 feet from the ground.

The fire-fighters, who had followed their leader up the narrow staircase when a fire alarm brought them to the tower, were hurled from their feet to a landing fifteen feet below.

Three thousand persons, who had gathered in the street to watch the flames creep around the clock and small windows, heard the screams from the injured men. There was clamor as men ran to gain entrance to the hall and effect a rescue. Until word reached the street ten minutes afterward, the crowd believed a platform had collapsed at the top of the tower, and plunged the firemen to death.

Men from the Central station, who rushed up the stairs, found Carl Cramer and George Messick, nozzlemen, stunned on a platform below the roof. Dazed from the shock, they had crawled to that spot to escape the flames that streaked from the top.

Further up, on the first landing from the main section of the tower, the rescuers discovered Profatt, unconscious, gripping the legs of Barnett. He had pulled the body down a 15-foot stairway from the tin covering on which Barnett had stood when he received the full force of the current.

Profatt, when he was revived, still thought he had saved Barnett's life. Had the body remained on the metal covering a few seconds longer it would have been horribly burned, but so quickly did the electric chief act that not a single mark was found on the body.

Capt. John Barnett of No. 2 station rushed into the room where his brother's body lay after Father Moran had been summoned. When he realized all hope was gone John ran to the family home to break the news to his sisters, Elizabeth and Margaret.
