1876 January-February Caspar Morris incoming letters 1994

are very well and have so greatly enjoyed the freedom of outdoor life - I don't know how they will exist if they have to return to Egypt.

The Dr is perfectly well he writes but exceedingly busy - He has moved into some pleasanter rooms, only one floor above the street, since I left, and having vacant rooms has undertaken trying to have a few invalid boarders this winter & has an English housekeeper to make them all comfortable -

He is just as interested in Egypt as ever, and I do not know if he ever will be willing to settle where there are no Pyramids nor fossil beds, nor mummies - But my hope is that after he has seen America he will settle definitely upon a time when he will try to establish himself permanently in his profession here - I have always thought that Philadelphia would suit him better than New York - But perhaps he can not judge as well of Philadelphia this year - He will be anxious to see you all and to have all the advice that Dr Morris can give him as to what is his wisest course to pursue in seeking to open up a practice in a strange place -

I am very anxious to hear from some of you and shall write to Mrs Caspar M. hoping that she will answer my letter - I do not ask you to write, my dear friends for I know that you must find your correspondence rather troublesome -
