LOVE AND FORTUNE

Young Bank Clerk Saved Employer's Money and Wins Daughter for Bride.

By GEORGE ELMER COBB.

When John White, the banker of Scottboro, announced that he had dispensed with the services of Ned Walters, people were a good deal surprised. The young man was a general favorite in the town. He had been industrious in his province of cashier and had helped upbuild the bank. Mr. White had persuaded him to give up a promising position to come to Scottsboro, and Ned had every reason to believe that he had been awarded a permanent position. Suddenly, at a day's notice, he had been asked to turn over his books to a new cashier.

"Relative of mine, this new official," the bank president rather lamely explained. "Walters was all right—fine young fellow, and all that—but I had to make a place for my dead sister's boy. Sorry, but it couldn't be avoided."

"Rubbish!" commented Mrs. Bunsby, head gossip of the place. "Mr. Walters presumed to lift his eyes to Eloise White. That was enough for the old man, who wouldn't look at a son-in-law with less than a million."

Mrs. Bunsby had read the situation aright, and no one knew it better than the sadly disconsolate Ned himself. Of course he looked around for a new position. Meantime, awaiting a decision on some of his applications, he had a dull time of it in Scottboro. Mr. White had put his foot down firmly, forbade him the house, and Eloise was a dutiful daughter. She had met her lover just once since her father had dismissed him from his service.

"It is the last time, Ned," she said, like the brave, sensible little woman she was. "Until I am of age I shall feel that I belong to papa. You have told me that you love me. Now I am going to tell you that I return that love, and always shall. You must go away and make a name and position, and when I am eighteen we will meet again."

"A whole year to give her father a chance to marry her off!" reflected Ned dismally after that.

But there seemed to be no use battling the inevitable. He wrote a final letter to Eloise. It breathed undying fidelity, and as well restored faith in his ability to win for himself a place among men for her dear sake. The bank in another city where he first had been employed offered him a subordinate position. This was humiliating, but it was a start. Ned decided to accept the position.

It was his last night in Scottboro. With the morning he planned to go to his new place of employment. He was under promise not to see nor write to Eloise. It was nearly midnight, and he felt that he could not sleep, and left his room bent on a restless stroll. As a magnet, the home which held his one cherished treasure attracted him. He passed its palatial front. All was dark, and the household apparently wrapt in slumber.

Mournfully Ned passed the house. Then he started down a narrow lane. This was a short cut to the bank, which fronted on the next street. As he reached the point where it merged into an alley that ran directly behind the bank, Ned was surprised to notice, standing in the vacant space at the rear of the institution, a wagon.

In an instant Ned glided down the alley. Then curiosity and wonder gave way to rapid excitement. The wagon was a covered box vehicle, with hinged doors closing tightly at its back. These were open. Two stealthy figures were just entering the rear door of the bank. A metallic glint inside of the vehicle caused Ned to gaze more closely. Deeply stirred at an extraordinary discovery, he gasped out:

"The small safe from the bank vault!"

Then robbery, burglary, was afoot! Whoever had entered the institution must have penetrated to its most secret vault, to thus secure the little safe which was in fact John White's real treasure house.

The moment lost in deciding what was best to do, run and sound an alarm or remain and face the raiders, was a precious one. A sound at the rear of the bank attracted Ned's attention. Two men were coming thence, poking their pockets full of gold from bags of coin they carried.

Acting on a quick impulse, Ned gave a spring and landed in the wagon. The next instant he regretted it. The men slammed shut the two rear doors of the vehicle.

"Let's hurry," he heard a gruff voice speak. "We've got about all there is worth taking—whoa!"

Something had startled the horse. So suddenly did the animal start up that Ned was flung flat, striking the edge of the steel safe. He realized that the horse had run away. He steadied himself as he comprehended that the animal was dashing down the long incline sweeping to the river. The wagon swung about like the tail of a kite. It struck one of the bridge pillars, the horse tore loose, and the wagon crashed through the railing and went over into the river.

Ned's head was bleeding from a severe wound. He felt the swift current swirling the wrecked vehicle about. He tore at the shattered side of the box, squeezed through the aperture, the water all but engulfing him, and reached the shore, how, he never knew.

Ned must have been in a kind of delirium after that. When he was again restored to reason it was two days later. He lay on a couch in a strange room. A man, a farmer, sat by his side.

"Keep still, stranger," he urged. "You are all right, but the doctor says you must rest. You kept calling for some one so much," added the man, "that when my wife found a photograph in your pocket with a name under it, Miss Nellie White, she went to town and saw the young lady. She's here now, in the next room."

"Who is?" almost shouted Ned, springing up on his couch.

"Easy, friend, easy," soothed the farmer. "She's a grand girl, let me tell you. When she learned you was hurt, she gave up home, father, everything to come and nurse you. I know the old miser—man of means, and mean, too. He's down grade now, though—bank robbed, everything gone Now, then, say, I'm curious to know how you ever got into this fix.

Ned told. The farmer evinced the greatest excitement as his patient spoke of the wagon box that went into the river.

"Why," he exclaimed, "I noticed the battered wreck of just such a contraption floated into the cut-off on my land. Thought I'd fish it out for kindling wood some time."

"If it is the one I was in," declared Ned excitedly, "it holds the safe stolen from the bank."

It did, as they soon ascertained. Old John White had felt badly at losing his daughter; he had felt worse at losing his fortune. Now, with a chance to get both back, he graciously accepted Ned as a son-in-law.

GET ALONG WITHOUT WATER

Rabbits and Other Animals on the Southwestern Desert Have Never Been Known to Drink.

A curious fact in connection with animal life on the deserts of the southwest is that rabbits, quail, squirrels, deer, antelope, the mountain sheep, and any number of reptiles and insects, live at great distances from visible water. The jack rabbit is specially notable in this respect; and, moreover, flourishes in regions without a particle of green food in sight for miles and miles.

Westerners assert that the jack rabbit may be found, happy and fat, spending the day under a scrap of bush that makes little more shade than a fishnet. His skin is as porous as a piece of buckskin, and the heat is sufficient to evaporate every drop of blood in his body; yet he seems to get on very nicely.

Californians aver that no one has ever seen a jack rabbit drink. Those who have camped for days on the deserts in vicinities where the only water for miles round was to be found, and with rabbits everywhere, declare that never does one of the little fellows come to the springs to drink. Men have even gone so far as to examine the margins of waterholes in those districts, with never a track of the rabbit disclosed beyond where the grass grew.

One man tells of a raid of rabbits one summer that was beyond all conception by an eastener. The animals were so bold that they would come in before sundown. The irrigation ditches maintained by this man contained the only water to be found for leagues. He was irrigating sixty acres alone, and was up at daylight and on the ground till dark, when rabbits by the dozen were trying to get at the alfalfa; but, during the three months of extreme heat that then prevailed, when rabbits poured in on him from the dry hills, he declares that never was one of them seen to touch the water.—The Sunday Magazine.

Photographic Power of Wood.

Experiments recently made have shown that a section of a tree trunk or of a branch, cut across the grain, possesses the power to impress upon a photographic plate in the dark a distinct image of itself, plainly showing the rings of growth. There is a great difference in the intensity of this power among different kinds of wood. The conifers (pines and firs) possess it in high degree. The wood is placed either in contact with the pate or at a short distance from it, and the exposure varies from half an hour to 18 hours. Boards long exposed to the air, an oak box 100 years old, rotten wood from a stump, and even bogwood, have been found still photographically active.

PLEASANT VALLEY

The church and lodge bell is now being rung again after being silent for over six months on account of the sickness of Miss Ada Geiman. Her many friends will be glad to hear that she has improved and is able to walk about the room without assistance.

The annual election of church officers was held on Good Friday. The following officers were elected: Lutheran congregation Noah Powell, Elder; Walter Helwig and Upton E. Myers, Deacons. Reformed congregation, David H. Frock, Elder; C. Tobias Yingling and F. Leonard Yingling, Deacons.

Chicken hawks seem to be plentiful this year. Mr. Jeremiah Koontz has his wood shed well decorated with them. His children caught them in steel traps and the majority are large in size.

Rev. J. W. Reinecke will celebrate the spring communion on April 6th, at 10 A. M. Preparatory services Saturday afternoon. Divine service this Sunday, March 30th at 10 A. M., by Rev. J. Luther Hoffman.

Mrs. Edward Hahn has returned home after spending about a week with her son Norval Hahn and family, of Baltimore.

Don't forget the oyster supper this Saturday evening. The proceeds are for a lighting system in the church.

The spring term of the public school closed on March 21st. Quite a number of pupils were present the entire term. Those who were present every day were: Mary V. Myers, Helen M. Zepp, Ruth V. Geiman Margaret M. Myers, Fannie N. Yingling, M. Pauline Helwig, N. Pearl Myers, Amy A. Hahn, Mabel M. Zepp, Jos. H. Leister, Guy E. Myers, Herbert J. Smith, Furn F. Myers, Herman T. Logue Walter B. Smith, Edgar L. Leister, David E. Geiman, Earl W. Myers, Clarence E. Welk, Russel B. Smith, Vernon B. Myers, D. Willard Smith and David M. Feeser. Those who missed one day were: John L. Helwig, Carroll M. Leister, Bessie M. Leister and Bessie R. Yingling.

SMALLWOOD

The oyster supper held by the four Orders was a success, both financially and socially.

The party given by Chas. A. Wagner and Walter Wagner at Smallwood hall on Easter Monday night was very well attended, as there were from 150 to 160 persons present from different localities, viz.: Finksburg, Louisville, Gamber, Fenby and Smallwood. The evening was very pleasantly spent in dancing. It was enjoyed by all, even by the onlookers. The young people and the old ones too were sorry when the time came to separate and wend their way to their different homes. Music was furnished by Chas. A. Wagner, Elmer Shaeffer, North Barnes, Levi Gamber, Snider Arnold, Mrs. Lila Gibson.

Miss Elsie Conaway accompanying the string music on the piano.

All the farmers in this vicinity who have new ground are of the same notion this week as they are all pulling stumps and hauling them away. Mr. Wm. Saylor had a stump hauling match and got all of his stumps hauled off of his new ground in half a day. After they had finished their task those engaged in it were invited into the house to partake of a bountiful supper. Those who helped were: Messrs. Ivan Sayers, Chas. A. Wagner, Walter Wagner, Thomas Gannon, Jno. Hoffman, Wm. Saylor, Chas. Saylor, Herman Saylor, Frank Magin, Thos. Paynter, Wm. Gist, Bradley Blizzard and son, Ivan Blizzard, Frank Frick, Albert Frick, Levi Frick, Albert Arnold, Edward Niner and others.

Mrs. Henry Wardenfelt is in Baltimore this week.

Little Corinne Horton is still on the sick list.

A PARTY AT GIST

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Blizzard gave a party to their many friends on March 19th. The guests began to arrive early and continued coming until the house was overflowing. It was very warm for this time of the year. All doors and windows were open and still it was very warm for the dancers. Dancing was kept up until a late hour and when the guests realized it was time to stop and return to their homes they bade their host and hostess good-bye wishing them many more such enjoyable evenings. Refreshments were served during the evening. Those present were Messrs and Mesdames Theodore Blizzard, A. E. Smith, L. A. Smith, Wm. Gibson, Yates Murphy, Jesse Shipley, S. C. Hundley, Dr. Haley and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fross, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Philips, Mrs. Dock Blizzard, Mrs. Louise Jones, Misses Viola Arnold, Marie Grimes, Louise Amoss, Annie Miller, Jessie Shaeffer and sister, Messrs, Levi E. Gamber, Thomas Gannon, Wm. Hummel, Elmer Shaeffer, Wm. Bush, Brice Pool, Harry Gibson. John Easton, Walter Allen, Berry Buckingham, Chas. Wagner, Walter Wagner, Ernie Haines, Harry Buckingham, G. Swartz, Nolan Wilson, Oscar Nelson, Raymond Blizzard, Ray Brown, Thos. Jones and others.

SHIPLEY

There has been quite a number of people changed their residences this spring. Mr. Harry Hughes moved from Mr. Cornelius Shipley's farm to the one he bought from Mr. Grove J. Shipley. Mr. Carroll Williams moved from the Harry Wagner farm to the farm of Miss Elizabeth Williams, of this place, and Mrs. Keefer has moved from near Warfieldsburg to the Wagner farm, near this place.

The Ladies' Aid Society has been postponed until April 10th, on account of our minister being at Conference. Now remember, the Society meets at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Elias G. Shipley April 10th. All members are requested to be present.

Miss Mamie Hughes, of Freedom, has spent the past two weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hughes, of this place.

Mrs. Keefer entertained Mr. and Mrs. John Freyman, Mrs. Harry Byers and Mr. and Mrs. James Keefer and child Easter Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Grove O. Easton are rejoicing over the birth of a granddaughter which was left at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Myerly Saturday.

Mrs. Maggie Tawney visited Mrs. J. P. Wilhide Tuesday.

Mrs. Elias G. Shipley entertained Mrs. Maggie Tawney Thursday evening at tea.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Muller, of near Bloom, visited Mr. Henry Wagner Sunday. Mr. Wagner has been very sick but is now improving.

Mrs. David G. Hook who has been sick is improving.

MISSIONARY ANNIVERSARY

Sunday, March 30, was Missionary Day, at the Centenary Methodist Episcopal Sunday school. The report of the classes showed a total of $229.-44 for the months of March. This was increased later. Money previously collected brought the total to $273. It is the custom of the pastor to present a picture to the class, which brings in the largest amount of money during the month of March. The banner class among the contestants, this year was that of Miss Grace Yingling, who reported $47.65 The picture "Jesus talking to the woman of Samaria" was presented to the class to be placed with the other pictures which decorate the walls of the school room.

The second part of the anniversary exercises was held in the evening. Rev. L. Emory Bennett delivered an address upon the life and work of David Livingstone. Thirty eight stereoptican slides were used to illustrate the address. A very large congregation was present.

SOCIAL PARTY

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Caple, of Shipley, this county, was the scene of a very pretty social gathering Friday evening. The evening was spent in various games and dancing. At 11.30 o'clock refreshments, consisting of cake and root beer were served. After expressing themselves as having spent a very pleasant evening, and thanking the host and hostess for their hospitality, all departed for their home. Thos present were: Messrs and Mesdames Robert Caple, Andrew Polster, Henry Nickleson, Robert Zahn, Harry Shipley, John P. Wilhide and Albert Jordan; Misses Mary E. Owings, Viola Caple, Myrle Caple, Jannetta Owings, Marie Polster, Bertha Barber, Myrtle Owings, Cledie Williams, Bertha Williams, Goldie Shipley, Laure Shipley, Hilda Caple and Berkley Caple and Messrs Harvey Davis, Chester Shipley, Geo. MINISTER LOCKS CHURCH DOORS AND SEARCHES CONGREGATION

Frederick, Md., March 26—Anticipating disorder, Rev. Jay Yoe, pastor of the Pleasant Valley United Brethren Church, near Sabillasville, locked the door of his church after the congregation had assembled and ordered a county constable to search the male worshipers. Seven revolvers were taken from young men and turned over to the preacher. The latter placed the weapons on the altar within convenient reach of himself and went on with the sermon.

The church is situated in a section of South Mountain, near the Frederick and Washington county line, where disorder has frequently taken place at religious meetings. For some time the minister has been annoyed by indiscriminate revolver firing after service. On one occasion while on his way home he found himself in the midst of heavy firing. No one was injured, but for a while bullets whistled in every direction.

In addition to the revolvers, knives were found, but these were not taken. Some asked to have their firearms returned before going home, but the minister decided that it was best to hold on to the weapons for the present No action was taken against the pistol toters and an effort was made to keep the matter quiet.

A PLEASANT PARTY

One of the most enjoyable parties of the season was held Easter Monday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nickleson. There was plenty of music which was furnished by Messrs. Shipley and Davis. Various games and dancing was indulged in and every one had lots of fun. At 11.30 o'clock refreshments, consisting of cake, lemonade, candy and nuts were served. After thanking the host and hostess for the pleasant evening they had spent, all departed for their homes. Those present were: Messrs and Mesdames Henry Nickleson, Robert Zahn, George Barber, Harry Shipley, Wm. Edmondson, Albert Jordan, C. Harmon, J. P. Wilhide, and W. N. Baker; Mrs. Jennie Coleman, Misses E. Barber, L. Nickelson, M. Nickelson, Bertha Barber, Jannetta Owings, Viola Caple, Bertha Williams, Myrle Caple, Cledie Williams, Goldie Shipley, Mary E. Owings, Myrtle Owings, Laura Shipley and Annie Edmondson and Messrs Albert Nickleson, Wm. C. Caple, Geo. Nickleson, Jr., Earle Owings, Harry Nickleson, Clarence Caple, William Ernest and John Nickleson, Oscar Baker, Hershall Barber, Harvey Davis, Chester Shipley, Wm. Zentz, Robert Caple, George Owings, John and Charles Nickleson, Lester Polster, Joseph and Frank Nickleson, James Nightengale, Harry Richter and others.

Arrangements are being made for the forty-fourth annual meeting of the State council of the Jr. O. U. A. M., to be held in Hagerstown on April 15 and 16. The sessions will be presided over by State Councilor George E. Garrett of Baltimore. Mayor J. McPherson Scott will deliver the address of welcome.

There are nearly 200 councils in the jurisdiction of Maryland, with a membership of about 27,000. Each council will be represented by two delegates. This will probably be the last State council held outside of Baltimore, as the order is erecting a home which will hereafter be the central point of meeting in Maryland.
