1876 March- August Casper Morris Incoming letters 1944

SIDE TWO

accompanied by his wife, a daughter of the late Professor Syme of Edinburgh, and his brother Arthur Lister, to your approaching medical Congress in Philadelphia. Born a member amongst Friends, he has joined the Episcopalian Church, though still loving his old people. His name is well known, an introduction much more effectual than any thing I can say; and if it is in thy power to offer them accommodation I know that he would much value it. They are filling up the present interval in a little detour to Canada and Niagara &c. A letter addressed to the Post office at Quebec, Montreal or Niagara will find him. As his route was a little uncertain, perhaps it might be safer to write a line to each place place.

I expect to go forward towards the West, on 3rd day morning; and may probably spend First day at Germantown. I saw thy dear brother Israel at Twelfth St. on 4th day. But as the meeting was unexpected to us both, I did not say half to him that I should have liked. I have since received his affectionate letter previously written; and ✱ hope to write to him a few lines to-day.

Give my love affectionately to Galloway Chester. and to the other dear friends at Bethlehem I am more than ever united to us. I look forward with much pleasure to seeing them all; and to seeing thee and the other members of your family.

I am thy truly attached friend

JB. Braithwaite
