FARM POULTRY

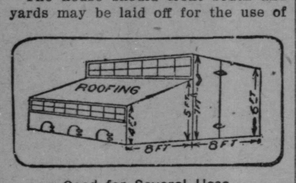

GOOD HOUSE FOR THE FOWLS

Should Have Southern Front and Yards May Be Laid Off for Individual Pens if Desired.

A good poultry house may be built after plans shown in the drawing. Such a house may be made any length desired and partioned into six-foot breeding pens, 16 feet deep, which would give 7 1-3 square fee per bird for one male and 12 females. The house should have a cement or board floor and can be so built as to make it rat, wind and rain prdof. I prefer a floor of cement, writes William Scott of Abilene, Kan., in the Farmers Mail and Breeze.

The house should front south and yards may be laid off for the use of individual pens if desired. This kind of house is also suitable for raising early hatched chicks.

The upper windows are hinged so they may be swung open at any desired angle or to be hooked up as the weather demands. The lower front is covered with one-inch mesh wire and a drop canvas or windows may be used. The window should be hung so as to swing in at any desired angle. Roosts are placed along the north wall. A single roost running the length of the building and set out two feet from the north wall, may be made to serve the purpose.

A roost shield for cold weather can be made of a frame the length of the roosts and two feet wide, to be covered with sound burlap on top and sides. Place this frame six inches above the birds' heads and let the burlap hang a foot below the roosts. This frame should be drawn up out of the way each morning.

If nests are place low enough not many hens will lay on the floor and it is often considered better still to place them right on the floor. A screen made of burlap so it will almost hide the nests make them more atractive to the hens and helps to prevent egg-eating.

'SULPHURING' THE HEN HOUSE

Job Should Be Performed at Least Once Every Month—First Remove All Combustibles.

To burn sulphur in a poultry house first remove all combustible matter. Then put an old iron kettle into a dishpan and place on four bricks in the middle of the house. In the kettle put some cobs which have been soaked in a solution of one part of pine tar to four parts of kerosene, sprinkle the sulphur over the cobs and set on fire.

Be sure to have everything arranged so as to beat a hasty retreat from the room and close the door quickly as the sulphur fumes are suffocating. Sulphur burned in this manner will penetrate every crevice as well as covering the surface and aids wonderfully in purifying the building and in destroying poultry vermin.

One pint of turpentine may be added to the half gallon of kerosene as well as the pine tar with beneficial results. Once a month is none too often to burn sulphur in every poultry house.

POULTRY NOTES

Never breed from immuature stock.

Ground bone is great for laying hens.

The first symptoms of roup—swollen eyes.

Dampness and chilling mean sure death to chicks.

Do not allow the fowls to be exposed to the strong winds.

Soft-shelled eggs are a sign of lack of lime or of over-feeding.

Scrub hens kept by scrub poultrymen make a bad combinatfon.

Sifted ashes scattered under the roosts make an excellent absorbent.

Try hard never to catch a hen by the wing or feathers; grab her by the legs.

A little granulated charcoal mixed in the soft feed is excellent in cases of diarrhoea.

If there are cracks in the walls of the houses, the chilly winds are sure to create a draft.

The best way to run an incubator is to follow the directions that come with the machine.

The hen that will not scratch for her living is too lazy to make you a profit as a layer.

Leghorns make poor sitters. Better not trust the eggs to them. They are better layers and foragers than sitters.

POULTRY

CURE FOR BROODINESS

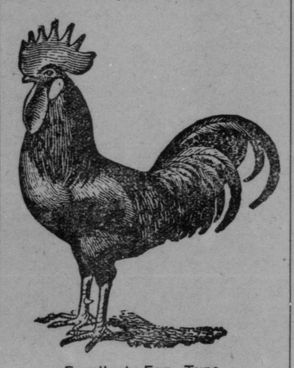

Two Methods Given for Breaking Up Setting Hens.

Strenuous Measures Must Be Adopted to Dissuade Fowl From Her Purpose—Leghorns Are Most Popular for Eggs.

(By PROF. JOHN WILLARD BOLTE.)

Contrary to general impression, broodiness in hens is not a fever and we have no evidence to show that it is contagious. The ailment, if we may term it thus, appears without warning. The fowl may have been laying steadily and acting in a perfectly normal fashion, when suddenly she becomes imbued with a great distaste for active pursuits. She betrays a very crabbed disposition, rushing at her erstwhile friends and pecking them viciously whenever they approach her. Her plumage sticks out at right angles, making her appear about twice as large as usual. With head drawn deep into her hackle feathers ,and wings and body taking up as much space as possible, she mounts guard over her chosen nest and defies all comers.

The hen becomes broody because nature prompts her with a sudden desire for a brood of chicks. She probably does not know why she does it, as she will take to potatoes or door knobs as kindly as to eggs, but she sets when the time comes just the same, and she will keep on setting until you break her up or let her hatch out a brood of chicks.

This pertinacity would not be so important if it were not for the fact that she quits laying and stays quit. She has decided upon a vacation and she refuses to work during this period. The loss of a couple of months of a hen's time is not to be thought of at any period, and especially during the spring, which is the natural time for setting and heaviest egg production as well.

If we do not wish to set the hen on eggs we will have to adopt strenuous means to dissuade her from her purpose and start her to laying again. There are a number of successful ways of doing this, and conditions will indicate the most favorable. The main thing is to act promptly and be thorough.

Remove the broody hens from the nests each night, as they are most easily detected then. They stick to the nest instead of going to roost. Dust them thoroughly with insect powder and confine them in an open slat crate or cage in a cool, light location. Keep water before them and give nothing to eat except a little whole wheat and green stuff once a day. This will not hurt the hen and about three days of this "water cure" will convince her of the error of her ways.

Another good way is to have a seprate pen with absolutely bare floor and walls, and no possible place to nest, and place all of the broody hens in it, in the company of two or three vigorous male birds. This scheme is frequently used on large poultry farms.

The heavier breeds are especially addicted to broodiness, the Asiatics being the worst offenders and the Plymouth Rocks and R. I. Reds leading in the American class. Leghorns and Minorcas and Hamburgs set so rarely that they cannot be depended on to raise their young. For this reason the Leghorns are the most popular breed for large egg farms, as they waste no time setting and the young are easily raised artificially.

Most Fertile Eggs.

The eggs from mature hens will hatch better and produce stronger chicks than the eggs of pullets. They are usually larger, too.

Discarding Setting Hen.

The old setting hen is gradually going out of business, with several hundred manufacturers of incubators and brooders as competitors.

Don't Change Its Mind.

When once set, the incubator does not have the privilege of changing its mind as does old Biddy.

A Chicago prosecutor says he believes jail terms for masters of gadding dogs would abate the perilous pest.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

IN THE DEACON'S PEW

BY J. E. MACDONALD.

The little frontier town of Sanderson possessed several saloons and gambling houses, two churches, a telegraph office, but no newspaper. Therefore, when Gen. Gorgon Snorter, late of the Confederate army, arrived on the scene and announced his intention of starting a daily journal everyone was pleased. But when the general visited Deacon Lamb, one of Sanderson's most prominent citizens, with a view to renting a suitable building in which to house the Sanderson Daily Trumpet, the deacon declined to lease without receiving a quarter's rent in advance.

"Sir-r-r-r!" thundered the redoubtable Snorter, "you insult me. Pay in advance, indeed—never, sir, never."

The deacon, one of the mildest-mannered of men, felt embarrassed and stammered out—for he had an impediment of speech: "N-n-n-no offense, I ho-ho-hope, g-general?"

But General Snorter's dignity was affronted and the initial number of the Trumpet contained a scorching article devoted to the deacon, and scarcely a day passed without the good man being in some manner vituperated in the columns of Sanderson's only paper. Now Deacon Lamb, a leading member of the church, was much respected by his fellow citizens none of whom approved of the Trumpet's attacks. Yet nobody dared to remonstrate with the editor. General Snorter was known to be the only survivor of four brothers, who had all died "with their boots on" leaving bloody records behind them; and if report spoke truly the controller of the Trumpet's editorial destinies had slain several personal friends during a somewhat limited residence in Texas. Yet the deacon preserved an unruffled calm under fire. Even when Elder Durham, fearful lest the truculent Snorter might proceed from verbal to physical violence, urged his brother churchman to try to placate the ex-terror of the Lone Star State the deacon merely shook his head and stammered:

"T-t-the g-g-general is a c-ch-ch-child of w-w-w-wrath, but I d-d-d-do-don't consider him a d-d-d-dad-dangerous man."

Thus matters stood when Snorter, in an editorial on a religious revival being then conducted in the town by a couple of traveling evangelists, seized the opportunity to emit the following vindictive blast:

"We know of no one in greater need of the sacred ministrations of these good men than that precious old scoundrel—Deacon Lamb. Even forty-rod whisky won't revive him. He has tried that for the past thirty years. If the liquor he has swallowed during that period could be poured into one vast tank it would form a lake sufficiently large to drown the entire congregation, the members of which have for a decade been deluded, cheated and gulled by this toddy-soaked and loathsome old hypocrite."

At about eleven o'clock of the day on which this article appeared Deacon Lamb entered the editorial sanctum of the Trumpet and approached Snorter's desk. The general looked up with a savage scowl.

"Well, sir-r-r-r," he growled fiercely, "what can I do for you?"

"N-n-n-n-no-not much, g-g-g-general, I m-m-m-merely w-w-wished—"

"Come, come, make it short, make it short, I can't sit here all day listening to your infernal stuttering."

"Yes, g-g-g-general, I'll m-m-m-make it as s-s-s-s-short as p-p-p-possible."

Taking the morning issue of the Trumpet from his pocket he pointed to the obnoxious article and asked the general if he wrote it.

"Of course I wrote it. What of it, sir?"

An instant later the deacon gripped the general by the back of his neck and, producing a stout rawhide whip, proceeded to lash the astonished warrior with tremendous vigor. Snorter struggled and yelled for mercy in vain. The deacon held him in a grasp of iron until he had finished his exercise. Then he hurled his victim into a corner, remarking:

"I h-h-h-have m-m-m-made it as s-s-s-short as p-p-p-possible, g-g-g-general, b-b-b-but when you are m-m-m-more at l-l-l-leisure I s-s-s-shall be h-h-h-happy to renew t-t-t-this c-c-c-con-conversation."

The news spread quickly through Sanderson and the deacon's friends begged him not to venture upon the street unarmed, as it was freely predicted that the ferocious Snorter would not rest until he had executed dire vengeance upon his castigator. But the deacon refused to encumber himself with a weapon. He only smiled mildly and said:

"T-t-t-the g-g-g-gen-general is a c-c-c-ch-ch child of w-w-w-wr-wr-wrath, b-b-b-but I d-d-d-don't c-c-c-con-consider him a d-d-d-dangerous m-m-m-man."

On the following Sunday morning, greatly to the surprise of the citizens of Sanderson, Deacon Lamb and General Snorter were seen to emerge from the former's house and proceed arm in arm in the direction of the church, where the fire-eater from Texas sat meekly in the deacon's pew, listened to the sermon with grave attention, and gave liberally to the collection.

Gen. Gorgon Snorter's conversion was a convincing and accomplished fact.

THE SHILOH BATTLE

Delivered on Decoration Day, May 30, 1904, on the Shiloh Battle Ground, By the Author, Lindsay S. Perkins, who was born near there.

Bathed in balmy airs of summer are the fields and woods to-day;
'Tis the time of love and roses—
would that it might live alway!
But to-day our hearts are chastened, for as in a sorrowing dream
Memory pictures us a Battle fought beside this tranquil stream.

Then the war-cloud hung in darkness o'er the lordly Tennessee;
Then the precious blood of patriots flowed like water on the lea;
Many a stout heart stopped its beating; many a home was draped in woe,
In the early days of April, two-and forty years ago.

Then the rifle and the saber flashed their lightning through the wood;
Then deep-throated cannon thundered challenge to the field of blood!
On a conflict more appalling has the sunlight never shone,
For the men who fought were brothers, one in speech, in flesh and bone.

Were their lives than ours less precious, that they were so doomed to die?
Did the Father mark the widow's and the orphan's piteous cry?
Aye, He heard them. Not a soldier fell in vain upon this sod
Where the seed was sown, in weeping, for the granary of God.

And the priceless grain so planted in the dawning of that spring
At the harvest of the Judgment will its own fruition bring;
Then, and only then, the story in its fullness we shall know
Of the men who fell at Shiloh, two-and-forty years ago.

Like the waters hast'ning onward in their still, majestic flow,
So the years their flight have taken, since the days of death and woe;
Anchored fast in earth's foundation still unchanging is the shore;
So the glory of the soldier conquers time forevermore.

And as winter signs are banished by the beauteous hand of May,
So the touch of time has taken all the marks of strife away;
All the thorns of grief are hidden by the tender, sheltering bloom
Where the lilies and the roses meet upon the soldier's tomb.

While with love our hearts are beating and a fragrance fills the air
As the sunlight falls on flowers wreathed in beauty everywhere,
Let the blossoms tell the story how in memory still we know
That our brothers fell at Shiloh, two-and-forty years ago.

POWER OF PERSUASION.

Referring to persuasion some time since Senator Charles Johnson, of Maine, cited the foxiness of Mr. Smith as a demonstration of its easy accomplishment.

Mr. Smith, so the senator said, had a boy about 10 years of age. Near him lived Mr. Jones, whose youngster was just about as old. One evening Mr. Jones called on Neighbor Smith to play seven-up and was amazed to see the Smith kid digging into arithmetic to razzle the ciphers.

"And to think how that youngster of yours was working at his sums," said Mr. Jones, afterward. "I can't get mine within 10 miles of an arithmetic."

"Willie used to be the same way," smilingly replied Mr. Smith, "but papa played foxy, and now he is enthusiastic."

"Played foxy!" wonderingly returned Mr. Jones. "How in the world did you do it?"

"I told him if he didn't study arithmetic," said Mr. Smith, "he would never be able to figure up baseball scores and batting averages."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

"That woman next door is really dreadful, John," said a young married woman to her husband. "She does nothing but talk the whole day long. She cannot get any work done, I'm sure."

"Oh," remarked the husband, "I thought she was a chatterbox. And to whom does she talk?"

"Why, my dear, to me, of course," was the reply. "She talks to me over the back fence." —Philadelphia Ledger.

"I want to be procrastinated at de next corner," said Mr. Erastus Kinkly.

"You want to be what?" demanded the conductor.

"Don' lose your temper. I had to look in de dictionary myse'f befo' I found out dat 'procrastinate' means 'put off.'"—Washington Star.

Tonsiline Cures Sore Throat

The throat is one of the most delicate parts of the body. It is also one of the most important, and should be given the best possible care.

The throat is the gateway to the body. The air we breathe, the food we eat, the liquids we drink, all pass through it. It is very easily affected by cold, strain, exposure, etc., and Sore Throat is therefore one of our most common ailments. Strangely enough, it is also one of the most neglected.

Sore Throat is a very serious matter, for the whole system is in danger in consequence of it.

Every Sore Throat patient is a candidate for Tonsilitis, Quinsy, Diphtheria and other serious or fatal diseases, all of which can be prevented by the timely cure of the Sore Throat by the use of TONSILINE.

If taken in time a dose or two will do it.

TONSILINE is made to cure throat diseases and nothing else. It is the one remedy for this purpose sold largely in the United States. Every user endorses it; every physician, knowing its virtues, commends it.

The one most important thing to remember about TONSILINE is the fact that it really does cure Sore Throat.
