0769

1882 Cooper Morris incoming letters 1994

sanctify these bereavements, we shall be made more ~~fit~~ meet for his presence when his summons comes.

The week before last witnessed the removal of Samuel Gurney, the second son of the Samuel Gurney who was in his prime when we first visited this country.

He had not the talent of his father, but he was uniformly kind & courteous, and having no family, gave himself up, in great measure to works of benevolence.

My brother Charles continues to be in an anxious state, and is forbidden to go up and down stairs; though able to walk out a little on level ground when the weather is fine.

My brother Bevan's wife has been absent from home for nearly four in the hope of warding off some threatened serious mischief to the lungs. She has spent most of the winter at Falmouth, and is now at Torquay, on her way to London. I am thankful to say, ~~we are~~ my wife & children are in pretty