ADVERTISING FRAUDS

"Printers' Ink" gives a list of 19 states that already have laws against advertising frauds. In the early stages of this movement the newspapers were rather skeptical about its practicability. It seemed as if the big producers could escape through the astuteness of their lawyers, while small dealers might suffer where there was no wilful intent to deceive.

Most publishers would like to print a clean sheet of business announcements. But they can't run to earth every fraud that seeks publicity in their columns. Their business is the collecting and printing of news. If they spent their time on detective work, the public would not care for their newspapers.

Publishers, however, would be glad could some responsible agency assume the responsibility of weeding out fraudulent advertising. The newspaper gains nothing by such advertising in the long run. Every dollar that is paid to fakes and frauds is a dollar drawn from the channels of legitimate trade. If it went into the hands of those who supply the necessaries of life, the publishers would get their share.

The worst offenders in the matter of advertising frauds are a certain class of daily newspapers in the large cities. Quack healers who claim to cure everything from blindness to cancer, Wall street tipsters who could make millions themselves if their little gambling guesses proved true, all these get all the space wanted and no questions asked, if they can show up the price.

Retail advertising is the cleanest and whitest in existence. Retail merchants know that a false advertisement is a boomerang. It hurts not merely the one who inserts it, but the whole business community. The man who should persist in such statements would soon find himself an outlaw in retail trade.

THE STUDY OF SPANISH

A few years ago studying Spanish was an educational fad. It was rightly felt that expanding commercial relations in Latin-America called for business men who could talk and write to possible customers.

But many pupils acquired only enough Spanish to read it blunderingly. They could ask their teacher in broken phrase book jargon, to lend them his penknife, could perhaps call a carriage or order a dinner. But in writing a clean business letter, or meeting a customer, they would have been helpless.

The last number of the Army and Navy Journal states that a part of the regular daily work of the cavalrymen now patrolling the Mexican border, is the study of Spanish. Thus the threat of intervention has made the language necessary in an unexpected quarter.

A business man was telling the writer a short time ago of the way it affected him. He had been negotiating for the purchase of a ranch in South America. He suspected that the selling agent, in their tour about the place, had taken him over some attractive ground that did not belong to the ranch at all. But in his ignorance of the language, he was not sure.

Later he took along a young American who could speak Spanish quite well, and did not notify the selling agent of his visit. A party of foreman and others took him over the property. They talked freely among themselves, and the young American could understand about all they said. When it came to any critical point, he would get out a phrase book and ask a question in a blundering way. In that way he nailed them down on important points and found exactly what the property included.

What is needed to help on commercial relations is not a lot of men who can talk an awkward smattering of Spanish. It is a smaller number who have studied several years and can speak and write with facility. A fellow so equipped will find many opportunities.

THE MATERIAL VALUE OF BEAUTY.

It used often to be remarked that "Beauty is a luxury." This spirit has made the majority of American towns quite ugly. Meanwhile, as education advances and people travel, they learn that good taste is not costly. Also ugliness is often terribly expensive.

The spring is the time of much new construction. It is the season for cleaning up and beautifying towns. The time has gone by when the community as a whole views with indifference the character which new growth takes. There is a growing desire for simple lines, harmonious and eccentricities that one sees nearly everywhere.

When people are looking for a place for residence, the first thing they ask is to the chances for business. The second question may be "What kind of schools do you have?" In perhaps even more cases it is "Is your town an attractive place to live in?" If on visiting the prospective home, the streets are seen to be slatternly, the buildings grotesque and ill kept, it will take very good business or educational prospects to neutralize these disadvantages.

Many towns have increased their taxable property by the simple and inexpensive expedient of cleaning out unsightly buildings around the railroad station, and planting trees and shrubbery.

Thus beauty has its distinct commercial value. A street with trees and flowers makes every house more salable at higher prices. Other things being equal, prospective residents will pay more money to live in a town where a consistent attempt is made toward beautifying the place.

An ugly house cheapens near by property. The people who do not have good taste on such matters should not arrogantly parade their lacks before the public. Let them ask advice from some one who does possess good taste.

THE DEMOCRACY OF TRAVEL.

A leading railroad company recently cut off the customary supply of bread and butter from its dining cars and made a special extra charge of 10 cents for the same. The incident, while unimportant in itself, has started some criticism as one of many tendencies that bear hard on the ordinary traveller.

If a fashionable hotel, patronized by those of social pretensions, introduces extra expense or frills and fads, the public can go somewhere else. But a railroad is the broad highway which all sorts and conditions of men are forced to use. On long distance trains there should be comfortable eating arrangements for all. The drummer, the school teacher, or the workingman, should not be compelled to scramble for food when the train stops five minutes. It is not fair that they should have to gulp down a dyspeptic lunch at the stand-up counter, while their neighbor eats a high priced meal in quiet and peace in the diner.

Formerly the railroad charged a fixed price for all dining car meals, commonly $1.00. Ordinarily while travelling, two square meals, with a bite between, would be enough. Yet if one merely wanted a banana and a few saltines, he must go into the diner and pay his dollar.

Many roads have made a strong bid for popularity lately by running a lunch counter on trains. Not many of them keep the old custom of a high table d'hote meal at fixed price.

Some railroad restaurants put on Smart Set manners by stationing a boy at the door to take coats and hats, he expecting a tip for his unasked service. The tipping system is particularly obnoxious when it is enforced by waiters and others in the democracy of the railroad dining room. Railroad travel should provide simple fare and customs for all who desire to travel inexpensively.

Dr. Fahrney's Teething Syrup is the only baby medicine that is always safe. Teething made easy. No bad nights. 3 6 2-m

The hotel men in session at New York discussed the tipping question. Probably if they hang together they can get their employes to pay them for the privilege of working and collecting tips.

"Is It a Boy or Girl?"

A baby's sickness is looked upon as a matter of course; most infant troubles can be prevented if you administer

It soothes and strengthens the baby's system. Can be given to babies one day old. Prevents Cholera Infantum; makes Teething simple and easy, relieves bowel complaints. 25 cents at druggists. Trial bottle free if you mention this paper.

A MARVELOUS FERTILITY OF THOUGHT

A very notable example of fertility of composition has been given in the newspaper career of George Alfred Townsend, whose pen name was "Gath." Mr. Townsend, who has just died, wrote a letter for leading journals that averaged daily from two to four columns in length. He also wrote poetry, plays, stories, histories and works of travel.

Clergymen often complain, after writing one sermon a week for a period of years, that they can say nothing new. Yet most newspaper editors and writers turn out a column or two daily, year in and year out, and the public still finds life and spice in it.

Mr. Townsend's flow of copy was so enormous as to have few parallels. Still if a man has the true spirit of journalism, he can do much to promote fertility of thought. By effort to come in contact with interesting people who have ideas, by constant reading of books, newspapers and magazines, he can keep filled the reservoir from which he makes a daily draft of ideas.

James F. Rinker, E. Main street, Westminster, Md., says: "I suffered for some time from kidney and bladder trouble, brought on by a cold. My back ached intensely and I felt miserable in every way. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Moore's Drug Store, gave me relief. I willingly confirm my former endorsement of this remedy."

Mr. Rinker is only one of many Westminster people who have gratefully endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills. If your back aches—if your kidneys bother you, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mr. Rinker had—the remedy backed by home testimony. 50c all stores.
