MANCHESTER

The remains of Mr. John Bond were brought here on Monday from his home in Woodberry and laid to rest in a family lot in the new cemetery with only grave service. Funeral service was held on Sunday evening in the home. Mr. B. was a resident here for several years when he and family moved to the above place, his wife having died about a year ago.

The Willing Workers Aid Society of the Reformed Church met in a monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. George E. Leese on York street. Mrs. Land presided and opened the meeting with devotional exercises. At roll call a collection of $4.50 was taken, followed by a business period at which it was decided to get up an enterprise to increase their treasury.

The operations at tearing down the church has been much interfered with by the rain but most of the wood work has been taken out and only the walls are standing which will be thrown down, making the clearing away of the debris a matter of no little consequence. As announced a special service will be held and ground broken for the new building on Sunday next. The members of the Sunday school met in the school house on Sunday but found the accommodations for their meetings unsatisfactory and will meet hereafter in the U. B. Church on High street in which the Rev. Lau will hold services on Sunday morning next.

The funeral of Mr. Abraham Snider was largely attended last week, the services being held in the Reformed Church.

Mr. Horatio S. Oursler has had concrete walks put down through his garden and yard which adds much to the comfort of the home. On Sunday morning when going to his stable he saw a small long bodied animal in his chicken yard. Being a something he did not know what he made it known to his neighbors who soon were on the sight seeing and guessing what it really was which was decided when Cap. Loats put in an appearance and informed them that it was a ferret. It was caged and crowds of people were at the home during the day. It was seen on Saturday evening among the material from the church, but up to this writing there is no clew from whence it came. Mr. O. gave us his experience with it on Monday. He caught a large rat in a wire trap. The ferret was sleeping all the morning b when he held the trap near to the cage it roused up and plunged around in the cage. He then opened both the cage and the trap and dropped the rat in the cage. Although the ferret attacked it yet it seemed blind. Some one suggested to take the cage in the dark. Mr. O. carried it into the cellar and no sooner had he reached the darkness of the cellar it sprung upon the rat, grabbed it by the throat and pounded it upon the bottom of the cage for quite a time. He showed us a booklet on ferrets that tells all about how to treat and keep them.
