So I shall continue to feel, while my face is firmly set to the South, & then, my back once turned, I go gladly to what lies before me.

Mr R. unites with me in kind regards to Mrs Hollingsworth & Miss Minnie.

Very sincerely yours

A. D. Rudolph

The ember fires upon my hearth are dying,
– The drooping flowers went out on home ago, –
And in the pines the rising winds are sighing
To emphasize what I already know.
The summer days have come & have departed,
The flush of health gives place to cool decay;
And earth takes back the life which she imported,
And holds it for her resurrection day.
