We are glad to state that Mr. Silas Jenkins, who had been sick, was able to attend the Decoration services and help strew flowers over the graves of his friends, both the "blue and the gray," how few of whom are left to take a part in scattering flowers as tokens of love ever fitter who they remember as soldiers taking part in those battles of '61. E'er long the time will have passed when flowers will not be strewn in sympathizing memory o'er the heroic dead. Though we trust 'twill never come when they will be forgotten by our present generation. While time and flowers last may they be strewn with willing hands over graves of the Blue and the Gray, ever thanking God for the freedom for which they fought.

HAMPSTEAD BREAKS GAMBER WINNING STREAK 6 TO 5

Hampstead won a lucky game from Gamber Saturday, May 30, at Hampstead. Gamber's line up appeared with two new recruits and they made a favorable impression in the fifth with three men on bases and one down Arnold struck out Richards. Gorsuch dropped the third strike and recovered the ball and stepped on the plate and threw wild to Naylor on first, allowing Evans and Wells to score. Murray followed with a single scoring Davidson making the third run for the inning. After that Arnold was invincible, having 13 strikeouts. Evans for Hampstead pitched a good game and his nine chances were accepted without an error. In the first inning manager Beit was hit with one of Arnold's inshoots and had to retire from the game in favor of Richards. The score:

RAILROADED BY MANCHESTER

Manchester defeated the strong B. & O. Electrical Department Baseball Club of Baltimore, Saturday, May 30, 4 to 0. The railroaders could not connect with Taylor's shoots and he applied the kalsomine in a very memorial manner. No less than 12 of them swung themselves into the "Casey" Hall of fame while but two managed to land a safe one apiece. The game was called in the sixth inning to allow the visitors to catch the train and in that inning Taylor allowed one hit and one in the third. The only visitor to get beyond second base was E. Burke and he was thrown out at the plate by at least ten feet when he attempted to score from second on Clark's single in right field.

Manchester scored two runs in the second inning on 3 singles, a base on balls and an error and followed with two more in the fifth on 2 singles, a stolen base and an error. With two down in the third Sullivan hit to left center for two bases and attempted to steal third while E. Burke was holding the ball but was called out on a close decision. R. Taylor contributed two hits and both of them figured in the scoring. C. Taylor demonstrated his "whip" by picking Simpson off first base after he received a base on balls.

Next Saturday Manchester will play the Ruxton White Sox of Baltimore.

CHURCH AT WOODSBORO DEDICATED

The new Lutheran church at Woodsboro, Rev. Reese St. C. Poffinberger, pastor, was dedicated on Sunday last. Rev. H. H. Weber, of York, secretary of the Church Extension Board of the General Synod, preached the dedication sermon in the morning. Mr. G. W. Yeiser, of Union Mills, delivered an address before the Sunday-school in the afternoon, and Rev. J. A. Singmaster, of the Lutheran Theological Seminary, Gettysburg, Pa., preached at night.

The congregation raised $11,000 before the church was completed and large collections were taken at the dedication services.

The edifice, which is one of the handsomest in Frederick county, is built of pressed red brick with terra-cotta trimmings. It cost $18,000. The main auditorium and lecture room are on the second floor, the Sunday-school room on the first.

A new organ costing $1,600 was installed. There are 11 memorial windows. The church has its own electric plant, which supplies light. Services in connection with the dedication are being held every evening this week. Rev. Wm. H. Hetrick, pastor of Grace Lutheran Church, this city, will preach tonight.

THE POWER OF THE SMALL STOCKHOLDER

Recent developments in the railroad world emphasizes the insignificance of the small stockholder. He is a pawn in the chess play of giant forces. Nevertheless he has a weapon of which even the Morgans and the Mellens and the Harrimans are fearful, and that is his tongue.

The ideal of the magnate is a meeting where the directors appear with a sheaf of about 437,542 proxies in their pocket, all for the old management. In the old days there were many stockholders from Missouri. The man with five shares and an inquiring turn of mind could make more trouble than the railroad presidents could oil over in a year.

In these later days of vast combinations, it has seemed useless for the average small stockholder to attend the meeting of his company. In the majority of cases he lived too far away. If he did take trouble to be present, everything was slated, greased and expedited. The reports were bewildering arrays of big booming figures, not particularly lucid or comprehensible. They made his head ache. By the time he had his spectacles wiped, and had begun to peruse the report, the business was done, and the meeting adjourned.

Railroad magnates are much like other people. With all their sagacity, they make mistakes. They lay Napoleonic plans, which run counter to some plain fact of human nature. Average untrained shrewdness can offer pertinent comment, to which the most competent director may well listen.

The small stockholder then serves his own interest well when he spends some time in perusing the reports of his company and studying the plans and methods of the management. Even though he may be ridiculed as the mere owner of five or ten shares, he can be sure that a host of other and larger stockholders are glad if he speaks out in meeting.
