SIDE TWO

the hope that I may some day be able to join you there; the visit paid there is remembered most vividly and with grateful pleasure. I wish, however, before that can take place, that you and dear Cousin Anne could come and visit me, here, now that you are gradually breaking loose from your engagements in Philadelphia, I hope you will be able to accomplish it. We cannot offer you much excitement of society, as we must necessarily live a very quiet life, but there might be found many objects to interest you in this "Great Babylon" as Mrs Eckard called it and, within doors, you could rest, and have the satisfaction of conferring heartfelt pleasure by your presence with us. When Ellen was here, she got me the music of the little Hymn "Oh that will be joyful" and I have been learning it, with the sacred association of your dear little Cornelia's love of it, making it still more interesting and sweet in its sounds & words. It seemed as if the dear child had been led to taste of the blessedness of Heaven, before she entered into it, that she might comfort you by it.

Farewell, My dear Cousin, may the best blessings rest upon you evermore.

your affectionate Cousin
Emily Hollingsworth

Pattie has just come home from an excursion down town and desires affectionate regards.
