The War In Europe

Constant Battling During the Week.

Germans Gradually Approaching Paris After Hard Fighting.

Allies Fall Back, But Keep Their Lines Intact.

French Government Removed to Bordeaux.

Russians Win Great Victory Over Austrians in Gallicia.

Germans Claim Victory Over Russians in Battle and the Capture of 70,000 Prisoners.

Russians Admit Repulse of Two Corps But Say German Story is Exaggerated.

Two things stand out prominently as factors in the gigantic war in Europe. The Germans are advancing steadily toward Paris and the van of their army operating on that line is reported within thirty miles of the outer fortifications of the city. The other is that the Austrians suffered a severe defeat by the Russians in a battle of large magnitude in the Province of Gallicia.

In the German advance towards Paris, fighting has been almost constand between the Kaiser's immense army and the allied French and English forces. The Allies have been forced to fall back from one line of defence to another, but have resisted stubbornaly and have kept their lines unbroken.

Along the French and German border the Germans have fallen back before the French, having evidently withdrawn the bulk of their force from the French front and sent in to reinforce the army operating through Belgium towards Paris. The Capital of France has been transferred to Bowdeaux and the inhabitants of Paris are fleeing in large numbers from the city, which has been put in the best possible condition to withstand a siege. The city is encircled by a line of fortifications said to be 100 miles in extent.

The Russian Army in Eastern Prussia has not been driven out of Germany by its reported repulse, while the Austrians, it is said, are badly demoralized and apprehend a Russian advance upon Vienna. But reliable accounts of the operations of all the Powers engaged in the struggle are not obtainable, except such as are described above.

A distracting and most pitiful sight was witnessed at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. M. Harris, 1028 Greenmount avenue, Baltimore city, on Monday last, when their children were all taken, one by one, ranging in age from 2 years to 18 years, with scarlet fever. The disease in all four children, developed in about three hours time. Baltimore City Superintendent, Dr. H. A. Hoggans and Chief Gillens, of the quarantine hospital, made hasty retreat until, one by one, the children were taken by ambulance to Sydenham Hospital, where all four children, Arthur, 8; Treva, 16; Foutz, 7, and Anna, a babe of 2 years, were given immediate attention. As Mrs. W. M. Harris runs a large boarding house at that address and the disease is claimed to have been carried to the home by an undertaker, Wm. F. Dorsey, who a few days previous to date mentioned having laid to rest several children who had died of the disease. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Harris are grandchildren of Wm. R. Yingling, of Cranberry Valley.

DR. EDWARD HOTTENSTEIN

Dr. Edward Hottenstein, of Kutztown, Pa., died August 26, 1914, aged 82 years, 10 months and 25 days. He and his aged wife were residents of Kutztown for nearly 60 years.

He is survived by his widow and eight children—five sons, all of whom are doctors, and three daughters, one of whom is Mrs. W. F. Hersh, wife of Rev. W. F. Hersh of this city.

He is also survived by 16 grandchildren and 5 great-grandchildren. He was buried Tuesday last.

EDWARD SCHAFFER

Mr. Edward Schaffer died this morning at his home in Union Bridge aged 64 years.

Mr. Schaffer was born in Manchester, this county, and resided in Union Bridge since 1884, where he has been conducting a jewelery store.

He had been in ill health for about four years, but his trouble did not grow serious until recently when he was compelled to undergo several severe operations—one the amputating of a toe and later the entire foot.

His widow survives him. The funeral service, conducted by Rev. George Royer, will be held Sunday at the Lutheran Church in Union Bridge, and the interment will be in Union Bridge Cemetery.

WOULD MAKE TUBERCULOSIS SANATORIA MORE EFFICIENT

Methods by which tuberculosis sanatoria may be made more efficient through the employment of their "graduates" are discussed in a series of papers issued August 31, by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis in its official organ, The Journal of the Outdoor Life.

The papers by Dr. Charles F. Bolduan, of the New York City Health Department, Dr. Sidney F. Goldstein, of the Free Synagogue, New York, and Dr. David R. Lyman, of the Gaylord Farm Sanatorium of Wallingford, Connecticut, show that many tuberculosis sanatoria waste their efforts because they do not care for their patients properly after discharge. Dr. Goldstein found that in one sanatorium in New York, 52 per cent. of the work done was literally wasted. Dr. Bolduan's and Dr. Lyman's results showed some waste, but not nearly so large a percentage. The reason for these relapses is found in the unsanitary home conditions to which the patient returns, and also in the industrial conditions under which he is forced to work.

Dr. Lyman says that the greatest present need in sanitorium treatment is early diagnosis, and that such early cases can usually return with safety and success to their former occupations after discharge from the sanatorium. For certain groups of city patients Dr. Bolduan and Dr. Goldstein favor working places where they can work at their trades under medical supervision and sanitary conditions.

Experiments of this character are now being considered in several cities. In Philadelphia, the Henry Phipps Institute has opened a small shop for some of its tuberculosis patients. In New York, the Joint Tuberculosis Committee will soon establish an open air clothing factory, and a similar experiment is also projected by the Joint Board of Sanitary Control of the Cloak and Suit Industry. The Delaware Tuberculosis Sanitorium is considering a hosiery mill for its patients. At Otisville, N. Y., in connection with New York City's Tuberculosis Sanitorium an industrial colony is also being considered. A successful experiment in pottery making has been carried on for two years at the Arequipa Sanatorium in California.
