NO PEACE FOR MEXICO

President Wilson continues to receive reports, through his accredited representatives, of the increasing pacifation of the people of Mexico, but, carefully considered, that work is evidently yet far from accomplishment. The State of Sonora is in open revolt against the Carranza government, and Villa, who is in supreme control in Northern Mexico, has sent to the governor of the State several carloads of munitions and troops also.

Villa has repudiated Carranza as the head of the Constitutionalists and, incidentally of course, is not supporting the new government. Neither he nor his delegates from the State of Chihuahua will attend the national convention called to meet at the City of Mexico October 1st, to designate a Provisional President. His attitude is ominous of continuous trouble for Mexico. The military strength of the country lies in the States named and Villa is the only commander who had continued and uninterrupted success in the sort of warfare waged between the Constitutionalists and the Federals.

Threats of secession were freely circulated in the northern tier of States at an early period in the war between the elements named, but died out as the Constitutionalists triumphed. It will not be surprising if they shall be revived. At any rate no immediate prospect of peace for the distracted country will appear while these States shall continue in revolt.

NOT YET SETTLED

The prospect of a settlement of the mining troubles in Colorado has not yet been realized, and the plan proposed by President Wilson and his advisers is still in abeyance, the operators not having agreed to accept it. Operators claiming to produce 70 per cent of the coal mined have declined to agree to certain provisions of the plan. They object to the three years truce with the United Mine Workers of America and will not consent to reemploy all strikers not convicted of crime, nor to submit to a final arbitration of all differences by a federal commission. They express willingness to obey the mining statutes of Colorado. The striking miners have agreed to the federal plan of settlement.

At this distance it is difficult to fully understand the equities of the proposed plan. The right of the Federal government to interfere in the matter, from a legal standpoint, is more than questionable and is plainly an infringement of the legal authority of the State. It is an extraordinary proceeding. Whether it can be constitutionally justified because of its extraordinary character is exceedingly doubtful. The power of the general government to interfere is limited to its authority to preserve order when the State is unable to do so. That power is now being exercised, but the President is unwilling to maintain a military force in the mining region indefinitely and warns the operators that upon them will rest the responsibility of an outbreak of violence and disorder if they shall continue to refuse to agree to the terms he has approved and which he refuses to modify. He must know however, that if a condition of violence should again arise, with which the State shall be unable to cope, he will be liable to be called upon to suppress it and restore order. Hence the operators are withing their rights in refusing to accept the government's plan and asking that their objections shall be seriously considered.

VIRGINIA AGAINST LIQUOR TRAFFIC

At the election on Tuesday in Virginia, on the subject of State wide Prohibition, the State voted against the legalized traffic by a majority estimated at between 25,000 and 30,000. The contest was a spirited one and nothing was left undone by either side to affect the result. Very naturally the friends of Prohibition are jubilant, and justly so, as their victory exceeded their most sanguine expectations. And its influence will not be confined to Virginia. The temperance people of other States and localities will take courage from the result and continue to wage warfare on the traffic with increased ardor and stronger expectation of triumph in the battle. It may really have some effect upon the local option campaign in this county, as showing the trend of public sentiment on the subject in other States than Maryland. Here it will give a fresh impetus to the effort for State wide Prohibition.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving remembrance of my dear cousin, Leonard A. Robertson, who died one year ago today, September 26, 1913.

Loved in life, in death remembered.

It was just one year ago
That his dear spirit fled,
How sudden was the summons
When word came he was dead.

Life was too short to say farewell
To those he loved so well,
But the time will come to us all soon,
When we with him shall dwell.

Gone in the best of his days,
Blighted in youthful bloom,
Torn from the hearts that loved him,
To sleep in the silent tomb.

By his loving cousin,
Melva E. Penn.
