1837-1838 Caspar Morris [redacted] medical notes -1994

Cantharides - & Croon the Nerve - Tree Phlorrhizin forbids Conjectures - We see different effects produced and are board to believe in specific action of medicines - that is that peculiar medicine have peculiar properties of their own acting different results on the same part - Do not believe that superficial application of Medicines - Bark will not always Cure Mt Fever - It has a specific effect on the system but not on the disease - Medicine should be admitted for peculiar morbid actions not for particular names of disease - Medicine in primary operation always excite or depress hence Stimulants & Sedatives - the first Elevating the action of the part to which it is peculiar determined by A primary effect - the primary effect of Sedatives is depress - Secondary effect different the practice medicine are therefore in primary action on some part or organ of the body - Must dispute whether there are any primary Sedatives - Medicine produce peculiar effects in consequence of peculiar susceptibility - Same Medicine act differently in health and disease hence the same Medicine may be stimulating to one part & the Lobstein and Sedative in another