THE HOUSEWIFE AND HER BREAD

The big cost of flour and advance in price of bread in many places has started some discussion in the women's clubs and the homes as to whether women today should make their own bread or not. To many of the older housewives, buying it from the baker or the grocer seems rather shiftless. In their industrious creed and practice the bread board and the kneading trough lay at the foundation of good housekeeping. A bride who could not manipulate the rolling pin should never have been married.

Many of the domestic economists of the present day believe that home bread is fast going the way of the home curing of meats or grinding meal, which scarcely exist today. As they look at it, the food manufacturer saves enough by buying materials in large quantities to make up for the cost of the labor, so that the housewife gets little or perhaps nothing whatever for her laborious hours in the pantry.

The old style baker often thought first of the number of loaves he could produce out of a barrel of flour. The baker's bread one used to see thus often had a certain spongy and elastic quality. It seemed as if the material had been expanded in some way, to make it seem light, and giving an erroneous impression of the extent of its food value.

Good home made bread never conveyed this impression, and has a certain firmness that gives a pleasant feeling of substantial quality.

The greatly increased sale of bread prepared outside of the home must have been due to a realization by food producers, that they must please the public by a good eating quality. The old time home made bread, with good butter, was very appetizing. A hungry boy would eat it ravenously, asking no sauces to make it more toothsome.

During recent years bakers have been learning from the arts of the old time housewife, and perhaps bettering her. A good business is the result. If the producer makes it clear that his methods are strictly cleanly, he will find all the trade he wants.

The millinery openings suggest that progress has been accomplished toward a safe and sane Easter, but some casualties are expected when the bills are presented.

The Sunday school teachers seem to think they can interest their classes in Easter without either candy or presents.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving remembrance of our dear mother, Lucinda Shipley, who died five years ago.

Gone from earth, no suffering nor pain,
Quiet the heart so loving and true,
Finished this life work so bravely done,
Folded the hands once so eager to do.

No more shall we see her form, loved and dear,
No more shall her voice our troubled hearts cheer,
But hope whispers sweetly in accents of love,
We shall meet our dear mother in Heaven above.

By her devoted daughters,
Tinny and Ella.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving remembrance of our dear father, Cornelius H. Shipley, who departed this life one year ago today, March 21, 1914.

Lonely the house and sad the hours,
Since our dear father has gone,
But, Oh, a brighter home than ours
In Heaven is now his own.

We can picture happy gatherings
Around our fireside years ago,
And we think of tearful partings
When you left us one year ago.

By his devoted daughters,
Tinny and Ella.

SPRING ADVERTISING

This newspaper invites its readers to the careful consideration of the announcements in our advertising columns of the fine lines of spring goods now being offered. This is a time of year when people are spending a good deal of money for new material. It makes a big difference to the family balance sheet at the end of the year, whether or not the purchases of the spring season are made carefully and thoughtfully.

If you go down town haphazard, blunder into the first store you see, and buy the first article offered, without previous consideration, you are apt to regret it.

The wise purchase is the one made after study of the announcements in the home newspaper. Examination of the advertising gives a clear idea as to what merchants are the most enterprising, and what special bargains are being offered just now. Pick out the men who bid the most actively and intelligently for your spring trade, visit their stores, and inspect their offerings, and you will find the chance for a selection that you won't regret.

GERMAN SUBMARINE U-29 REPORTED SUNK

About the severest blow yet felt by the German-Austrian Alliance is the capture, by the Russians, of the strongly fortified city of Przemysl, in Galicia. The place had been besieged from early in the war, but had resisted all attempts at its capture. Its outer fortifications were slowly battered down by the Russians, but little effect had been made upon its inner line. The garrison, however, was so closely invested that sorties attempted at various periods, failed, and, at last, disease and starvation forced its surrender. The Russians state the number of the defenders surrendered at 117,000. They were in a wretched plight and further resistance impossible. Probably the most important effect of the surrender is that it releases a Russian army of 200,000, in good condition for active service elsewhere. But it also gives the Russians a strong foothold in Galicia, which will not be easily wrested from them.

The situation in the west war zone is comparatively unchanged. Desultory fighting has been going on with, as usual, no definite result.

The Allies are landing troops along the Dardanelles, concentrating more war ships, and making a determined effort to silence the fortifications and force the way open to Constantinople.

Zeppelins flew over Paris and dropped bombs on the outskirts of the city, at night, during the week. Three or four people were killed, but no material damage was done to property. Apprehensions of other raids have led to the plan of putting the city in darkness upon future alarms.

Allies' aviators, it is reported, succeeded in dropping bombs upon a German shipyard and badly damaged a couple of submarines in course of construction.

German submarines continue to take toll of British shipping and have sent several vessels to the bottom during the past week.

A German ship interned at San Juan, Porto Rico, attempted to escape but was brought to by shots from Morro Castle and forced to return. The incident, it is claimed, may complicate American affairs with Germany; but there is apparently no cause for apprehension in that respect. Numbers of belligerent ships, it is said, are interned at various ports in the United States, and the government is determined to see that they shall be held until released at the end of the war.

Germany has not officially repudiated the sinking of the Frye by the Prinz Eitel Friederich, but the Administration at Washington expresses the utmost confidence that she will do so.

A fierce battle is raging in the Carpathian mountains and Petrograd reports the Russians as gaining advantage in the fighting.

Austria has strongly fortified her Italian frontier and Italy still remains neutral, while all the time being reported on the eve of mobilization.

A report, that the German submarine U-29 has been destroyed, lacks confirmation. London rejoices over the report, as the U-29 has destroyed many British ships.

But the end of the gigantic war is not yet in sight.

JUDGE WHO TRIED FRANK DEAD

Judge L. S. Roan, of Atlanta, Ga., who presided at the trial of Leo Frank, died Tuesday in Polyclinic Hospital, New York. He had been ill for several months and had been undergoing treatment for cancer. His condition became suddenly worse Monday and his relatives were summoned from Georgia.

Judge Roan came into public notice especially in connection with the trial and conviction of Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan, the 14-year-old factory girl, in Atlanta. He was for many years judge of the Stone Mountain Circuit of Georgia. After the Frank trial he was named as judge of the Court of Appeals. He did not run for re-election when his term was over.

$60,000 FIRE IN FREDERICK

The residence, wholesale and retail confectionery establishment of Adrian C. McCardell, one of the oldest properties in Frederick, was wrecked by fire early Monday morning. Mr. and Mrs. McCardell and Misses Mary and Pauline McCardell escped from the burning building with only the clothing they wore. After reaching safety Mr. McCardell collapsed from smoke and fright, and, with his wife, was removed to the City Hospital. Later they were taken to the Reformed parsonage. He is still ill from shock.

The adjoining Franklin Savings Bank, the Elsenhaurer Building, the Marvel Theatre property and the Central Trust Company were damaged by water. All the buildings, with the exception of the trust company, were at one time filled with smoke and some of the occupants prepared to move. The loss is estimated between $50,000 and $60,000.

The fire originated in a room back of the store and spread to the apartments on the second and third floors. Miss Pauline McCardell was awakened by the smoke and aroused her sister, Miss Mary McCardell, who was sleeping in an adjoining room. They ran to the second floor and aroused their parents, who were asleep. Miss Pauline McCardell sent in an alarm by telephone.

Reaching the street, Mr. McCardell rushed into the business office and saved his books. He then collapsed.
