A STORY OF A WOODPECKER

Last summer I heard a Woodpecker at the door and then I went to the door and saw what it was. What do you think it was? It was a Woodpecker and he pecked a hole in the door. When it saw me it flew away. I said good bye Woodpecker.

HOME TALENT

A TRUE STORY A BEAR

By a Westminster boy.

Dedicated to Dr. H. M. Fitzhugh.

My uncle John was in Alaska for seven years. When he came home I immediately asked him to tell me of his adventures in Alaska, which he did with pleasure. Now what do you suppose he told me first. He said that he had seen a bear floating on a piece of ice. The second thing he told me, he was walking along one day when he saw a lot of bark scratched off of a tree. My uncle is six feet high, had to stand on his tip-toes to reach the top of the hole, which the bear had scratched in the tree. This is all he told me of that bear.

Good-bye.

THE WIND'S MISSION

Ho! winds in power riding
On the will of nature's God;
From Northern ice to Southern clime
Then kissing the low green sod.
Come tell us of the mystery
Surrounding thy strange birth
When from the bosom of His love
God flung thee wide o'er earth.

Possessed of many languages
That voice this world around;
'Tis thine the power to teach us
Of nature's songs unfound.
We see thee with the flowers,
Wooing perfumed lives away;
Then skipping with the waters
Rippling music's many lays.

Its thine a broad pure mission
O'er alley, lane and street,
Do you sweep the thin pale faces,
Do you cheer with presence sweet?
'Till the stirring power of thy breath
Cools fevered brow and brain,
Humanity despairing grow strong,
Take heart again.
