SIDE TWO

thought I should be glad to know they had made the necessary connexions at Annapolis & there.
Your Uncle is much better. He is still in bed, but has taken some Beefsteak and rice for his dinner & thinks of sitting up this afternoon.
It has been raining all night & thus far during the day Mary will go to town this afternoon expecting to meet her Mother & father & dear little Frank at Madison Avenue house. They were to leave Long Neck by the boat & get to town Sometime this evening & leave in the morning for Oakland. As their rooms are engaged from tomorrow & especially as the steamboat trip is a very long & unpleasant one, on any other day of the week but Wednesday, we hope the rain may not interfere. I hope the dear little fellow may derive benefit from the change of air, but I am more afraid that it will be injurious. His parents have been advised to try the Effect & should feel as though they had neglected their duty if they did not. Thank dear Hannah for her nice letter. I had no wish to impose any task on you or her or the boys in writing & will try to be more patient with it in the future. It is a sad thing to have nothing especial to do to occupy one's time and thoughts, especially for one whose anxiety is so easily
