Stoves and Enamelware

ENAMELWARE

All Enamelware is not the same. Most people do not know that there are many grades of Enamelware and that each grade is made in one coated, two coated and three coated, thus making three different kinds in each grade. Then again the metal on which this coating is put is of different quality and thickness. All of these things are of vital importance to the life and wear of Enamelware.

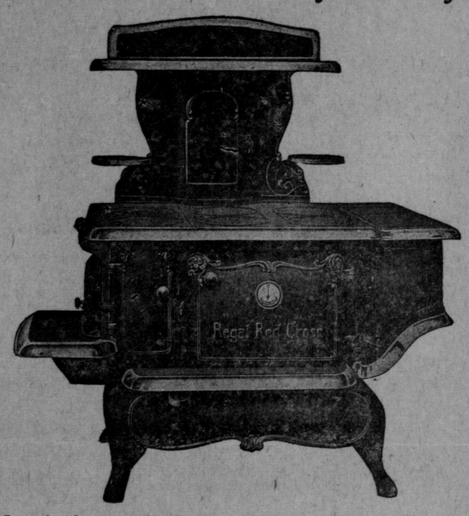

You cannot go by the appearance of Enamelware. Two utensils may look to be the same but after being used awhile quality will tell. Insist on getting High Grade Ware when you buy, and remember when you see a large utensil selling for Ten Cents you have a right to be suspicious for the cost of manufacturing it is a great deal more.

Moonstone Enamelware is a High Grade Three Coated Ware that is guaranteed to give satisfaction. The most extravagant thing you can do is to put your good money in cheap worthless Enamelware. Insist on the genuine Three Coated High Quality Moonstone.

Nickel Plated Tea Kettles, Percolators and Coffee Pots.

Although sheet copper and nickel which are the principal things used in the manufacture of Nickel Plated Ware have advanced to double of what the former price was our prices on this Ware remain the same. However we will not be able to sell at this price always only as long as our stock lasts. If you are in need of any Ware of this character you will do well to buy now.

Red Cross Cook Stoves and Ranges The Best That Money Can Buy

Now is the time to be considering that Cook Stove or Range. You do not buy a Stove or Range every day so when you do buy you want the best that can be had for your money. When you buy a Red Cross you will get better Stove value for your money than you can in any other make.

For Quality, Beauty and Design, Excellent Workmanship and Durability the line of Red Cross is unexcelled. Insist on getting a Red Cross Stove or Range do not be talked into buying any other.

We would be pleased to mail you our illustrated catalog with prices upon request.

WEANING THE FOAL IS EASY

Merely Matter of Separation, If Properly Cared for During Summer Months—Time Varies.

If the foal has been properly cared for during the summer months, being fed a little grain in addition to the roughage and dam's milk, weaning time will be merely a matter of separation.

The time of weaning will vary with conditions, but the best rule is to allow it five to seven months, says Farm, Stock and Home, as the work of the mare varies from heavy to light, but if possible, don't wean the foal before four months.

The important stage of the youngster's life is now at hand. Separation from the dam must be complete to be satisfactory, and the colt kept in a small lot fenced either with boards or poles. While all colts may not run into the wire, the one that tangles itself in the wire is invariably the most valuable.

The weaning that is most successfully accomplished is the one through which the colt suffers the least setback in growth. If at weaning time the colt can eat its full allowance of grain, two or three pounds of oats or one and one-half pounds of oats and two pounds of ground barley mixed together, with plenty of clean alfalfa or timothy hay, it will continue growing and cease to fret for its dam.

COMMON TAPEWORM IN LAMBS

Not Believed That They Are Responsible for Many Deaths of Animals, Says Western Expert.

(By I. E. NEWSOM, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, Colo.)

The common tapeworm of lambs is one that has a habit of getting into the duct leading from the liver, and for this reason many who have examined sheep, dead of disease, have suspected the tapeworm of causing the death. It might be well to state that more than 60 per cent of all western lambs have these tapeworms, as evidenced by finding them on the killing floors at the large packing houses. While it must be admitted that in a few instances they may cause some trouble, yet it is not believed that they are responsible for many of our lamb losses.

During the siege of the Kansas horse disease some man unfamiliar with the normal conditions in horses for the first time found Palisade worms in the abdominal arteries of dead horses. He at once jumped at the conclusion that these worms were responsible for the disease. Had he known that approximately 95 per cent of all horses have these same worms, his reputation might not have suffered.

It is rather common for veterinarians to diagnose tapeworms in dogs, and in about 95 per cent these diagnoses are correct, but that the tapeworms in these animals are responsible for disease is not at all evident, except in a very small percentage of cases. So it is with these tapeworms in lambs. They can always be found in posting any large number of animals, but that they are responsible for any serious disease is evident only in a few cases.

MOLDY SILAGE IS HARMFUL

Complaints Made That Farmers Lose Horses and Mules—Carefully Avoid All Spoiled Stuff.

Every winter farmers complain of losing horses or mules by feeding spoiled silage. Damaged or moldy silage is not first-class feed for any animal. Even cattle should be fed carefully, but the greatest care should be exercised with horses and colts. See that no moldy stuff gets into their feed boxes and that none is left there from one feed to another to spoil.

Good silage does not hurt horses, but remember the mold that sometimes occurs in spots may kill them at any time.

Winter Horse Feeds.

Do not try to carry the horse through the winter on a hay or straw ration. Such feeding induces indigestion.

The valor of the Turks who fled from Erzerum is not fully demonstrated, but they don't need to run any farther to convince the world absolutely of their discretion.
