SIDE TWO

confining their operations to animals in bad condition. I had them easy in the Spring - or rather late in the winter on old "Nan" but got rid of them without trouble by washing her with "Carbolic" Soap. The best plan is to get a good mild day and lather all over and let it dry on the animal and remain for a day or two - of one operation does not destroy them repeat it. I never found more than one application was necessary. I have examined some of the other lects and Horses that were then and still are in Long Neck and find nothing of the sort. I hope you may have no further trouble after a good lathering. Love to all. Affectly
