Baltimore.—Twenty thousand deep voices thundered approval; 20,000 men, moved as Baltimore men have never been moved before, rose, sprang, leaped to their feet as one; thousands of hats, handkerchiefs, gloves, canes were thrown into the air in the wildest enthusiasm—and then Billy Sunday, waving Old Glory above his head, turned from the audience and cried:

"Come, Rody! Play America!"

This was the scene witnessed in the tabernacle Sunday afternoon—a scene such as Baltimore never had before, a scene such as Baltimore may never have again.

Billy Sunday's famous sermon, Booze, did it.

Baltimore knows now why Sunday boasts it was this sermon that made Colorado dry; that it was this sermon that decreased by thousands and hundreds of thousands of gallons the liquor consumption in those territories where the evangelist has preached. No matter what the skepticism before of that part of Baltimore represented in the tabernacle Sunday afternoon, there is now belief that the boast is justified.

"Personal Work."

When you take down the telephone receiver, and the operator says: "Number, please," first ask her if she is a Christian.

This was Rev. Billy Sunday's suggestion in his sermon on "Personal Work" at the tabernacle. Here are some other ways by which, he said, persons may help him in his campaign to win Baltimore for Christ:

When the mailman stops at your door with a letter, ask him if he is a Christian. Put the same question to the milkman, the butcher's boy, the book agent, the insurance collector, the old clothes man and the gentlemanly individual who leaves the sample of soap for you to try. Or, and Mr. Sunday laid particular emphasis on this, call up the newspaper offices and ask "them" if they are Christians. Mr. Sunday did not explain just whom he meant by "them"—whether editors, reporters, compositors, pressmen, advertising men or printer's "devil."

"Go from house to house in your neighborhood," was another of the evangelist's suggestion, "or write letters, but spend a two-cent stamp; don't use a postcard."

Too Much Second-Hand.

One must experience religion to know God, Sunday said in his sermon. "There is too much second-hand stuff in the church."

God doesn't do things by halves," he said, and he repeated the legend that the birds were first made without wings and couldn't sing, and God made wings for them, and as soon as they started to fly they began to sing. Sunday branded this as a fake. "When the Lord does a job He finishes it right and you cannot improve upon it," he said.

"You must have your eyes in the back of your heads, you must be idiots if you can't see that the spirit of God is moving on Baltimore as it never has before; if you can't see that the time of a great awakening is at hand; that the old ship of Zion is sweeping down your streets, floating her standard, 'In hoc signo vinci!'"

Billy Sunday hurled the foregoing at 20,000 people at the tabernacle, and the applause that he received gave emphatic indorsement to the utterance.

Urges Personal Influence.

His text was "No man cared for my soul (One Hundred and Forty-second Psalm), and, logically, he expatiated upon the power of personal influence and the duty of individual effort to further the cause of Christ.

"I can name 50 men in Baltimore,' he declared, "whose influence is so potent that if they'd take their stand now for Christ 25,000 would follow them into Christ's kingdom inside of two weeks."

Replies To a Charge.

In delivering his sermon, in inspiring the members of his congregation to march forward down the sawdust aisles and shake his hand, Sunday was extraordinarily earnest. But at no time was he more vehement than when he digressed from his sermon to defend himself from the charge by his opponents that he lacks vital interest in the spiritual welfare of the thousands to whom he preaches.

"Do you mean to tell me," he challenged, springing upon his chair and whirling about to face all sections of the building, "that if I didn't care I'd stand here and work as I have had to do and as I will continue to do? I can go out and in a week earn enough to keep Mrs. Sunday and myself for a year. You let a couple of pugs stand up and pay them $150,000 to see them pound each other for 10 minutes, and yet when a minister gets a little money for preaching the word of God you call him a damned grafter.

"Yes I care. And there are many here in Baltimore who care. Every board in this tabernacle will bear testimony that Baltimore cares for the spiritual welfare of others."

Novel Reading Curse Of Day.

Novel reading was condemned in scathing terms by Rev. Billy Sunday.

In the first place, Sunday said, he had no use for the book that doesn't treat Christ and the Gospel as they should be treated. Too many such books are read until they are worn out, while the Bible lies unopened on the center table.

"One reason why people have such low moral standards," said Sunday, "is this damnable novel reading. One of the curses of this country today is novels. All the authors have different ideas of religion, and not one of them has the right idea."

Sunday's sermon was on "Sin," and he warned his hearers that if they didn't repent they would "go to hell so fast" they couldn't be seen for the dust.

Jolts For Church Members.

Church members came in for some hard jolts. Some of them, he said, "don't know the A B C of religion," and that is the great fault of today.

"Look at a lot of the stuff they call religion nowadays," said Sunday. "It's so close to hell that God wouldn't recognize it."

If church members would quit playing cards there would be an end to gambling, he said. "If church members would quit voting for booze the saloons would go to hell in a jiffy."

"If you want to know why blessings don't fall upon you," said Sunday, "it's because you're too devilish." God's promises to the man who confesses his sins and accepts Christ are numerous. "God can make Carnegie and Rockefeller look like plugged cents," he said, "so let's try to be millionaires in grace, not panhandlers at God's door."

HOT SHOTS FROM SUNDAY'S SERMONS

Booze gives you bats in your belfry, floating giblets, inflammation of the gizzard and discoloration of the mazuma.

For every dollar you spend on wet goods you will spend one cent on dry goods.

If the people of the country would cut out the booze I would show them one of the greatest revivals of business in the history of the nation.

The trouble in this country is not in the overproduction; it is the underconsumption.

There will be so many church members in hell for voting in favor of the saloon that their feet will be sticking out the windows.

If to kill the saloon would mean to kill business, then I say, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

I hope in the wise providence of God that I may be permitted to preach the funeral service over the liquor traffic.

You might as well try to run a powder mill in hell as to regulate the liquor business with high license.

If the church isn't against the saloon, then to hell with the church; and if the preachers and priests are not against the saloon, then to hell with them.

I claim the distinction of being the only man in America who has been able to make the liquor people quote Scripture.

Whiskey is God's worst enemy and the devil's best friend.

The anti-saloon element in America holds the balance of power.

The difference between the high class saloon and the low-down saloon is the one smells bad and the other stinks.

CHILDREN'S CORNER

STORY OF A CHERRY TREE AND WHAT WE DID IN SCHOOL

George Washington was a little boy. His father gave him a hatchet for his birthday. On the 22nd I went to school and found my teacher had drawn a little cherry tree (on the blackboard) like young George Washington cut down for his father. The teacher drew a large cherry tree, and it had real cherries on it; red, pink and sweet cherries. After we talked about George W., the teacher gave us all candy cherries off of the big tree, and we had a very fine time that day.

STORY OF GEORGE WASHINGTON FEB. 22nd, 1916

George Washington was a very good man.

He had a birthday just like any boy and when he was a boy about nine years old, his father gave him a hatchet, and he chopped his father's fine cherry tree down. He told the truth. After this his father died. His mother had a fine young colt and George jumped right on it, and scared the horse so that it fell down dead. He told his mother the truth about it.

He grew to a man. To be a general and president of the United States. Good-by for this 22nd birthday.

"Pat, how's your wife?
Pat. Dead, I thank yer honor. How's your own?

The other day a colored man fresh from "Ole Virginy," was on the witness stand and the judge asked him: Do you know what an oath is?" "Yes, sah; when a man swears to a lie he's got to stick to it.

THE NAUGHTY LITTLE THIMBLE

Once, in the days of long ago,
A little Thimble refused to sew.
It said, "I don't care what you want to do—
I'm tired of shoving the needle through!
I'm tired of helping the Doll's clothes to fix,
And getting, myself, just nothing but pricks,
Sometimes on that side, sometimes on this!
And then, if by chance the needle I miss,
Though not my fault, I am thrown on the floor!
So I really don't think I'll work any more—
I'll drop softly down, and roll over there,
And hide away under the big rocking Chair!"
—Margaret Erskine, in Little Folks.

AGES OF ANIMALS

A bear rarely exceeds twenty years; a fox fourteen or sixteen; lions live long. Pompey lived to the age of seventy. The average of cats is fifteen years; a squirrel and hare seven or eight years, rabbits seven. Elephants have been known to live to the great age of four hundred years. A dog twenty. Pigs have been known to live to the age of thirty years; the rhinoceros to twenty. A horse has been known to live at the age of sixty-two, but averages twenty-five or thirty.

Camels sometimes live to the age of one hundred. Stags are long-lived. Curvier consideres it probable that whales sometimes live one thousand years. Ravens frequently reach the age of one hundred. An eagle died at Vienna at the age of one hundred and four years. Swans have been known to live three hundred years. Mr. Mallerton has the skeleton of a swan that attained the age of two hundred. Pelicans are long-lived. A tortoise has been known to live to the age of one hundred and seven. —Selected.

The Bardstown (Ky.) Record is credited with the following remarkable story: A curious incident of the sagacity and imitative habits of dogs came to our knowledge a day or two ago. We warn our readers to be prepared for an almost incredible story, but it can be substantiated by affidavits from several persons of the highest standing, members of the family in which it occurred, some of whom are ladies. Previous to the war, Governor Charles A. Wickliffe was an extensive slave owner, and each one of his negroes owned one or more dogs. In 1869 one of these dogs, a spaniel, manifested symptoms of hydrophobia, and was shot by Judge Wickliffe the Governor's son. Immediately after the shooting all dogs on the place collected around the body of their dead companion, and, after prolonged howling, prepared for a funeral. "Old Bull," the largest and fiercest dog, took the body in his mouth, and started for the woods south of the Governor's residence. The other dogs formed into a regular procession, and in single file followed the body to the woods. They selected a tree just outside of the fence, and at the foot of it dug a grave, in which "Old Bull" deposited the body, and all the dogs joined in covering with earth the remains. After the grave had been filled all united in more howling, which was kept up some ten or fifteen minutes, when they dispersed.

AN INGENIOUS DECEPTION

Sanetant relates the following anecdote of Schwartz, a famous German painter. Having been engaged to paint the ceiling of the Town Hall at Munich by the day, his love of dissipation induced him to neglect his duties, and the magistrates and overseers of the work were frequently obliged to hunt him out of the tavern. As he could not longer drink in quiet, he stuffed an image of himself, left the legs hanging down between the staging where he was accustomed to work, and sent one of his boon companions to move the image a little two or three times a day, and to take it away noon and night. By means of this deception he drank without the least disturbance for a whole fortnight together, the innkeeper being aware of the plot. The officers came twice a day to look after him, and seeing the well-known stockings which he was accustomed to wear, suspected nothing wrong and went on their way, greatly extolling their new convert as the most industrious and conscientious painter in the world.

LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE

SWEET AIR

An odd species of bird has made its appearance in our vicinity. It has a bright blue head, white breast with shiny bright black plumage covering its body. It is a sweet songster and a very attractive little bird.

We are very sorry to learn that Mr. Joshua Leatherwood, of Baltimore, is critically ill at his home with little hope of his recovery. He lingered at one of the hospitals puite a long time but was removed to his home recently. We extend to him and family our deepest sympathy. Mr. L. resided at Porter's, this county, a number of years. He was for several years a teacher in the public schools of Carroll county. He married a Miss Hood, of near Mt. Airy, and has several children. One year ago he was one of the most robust men of his age, conversed most jovially with us, and to know of his being so suddenly stricken arouses grief within us. Mrs. Leah Penn, of Winfield, and Mr. Frank Leatherwood, of Mt. Airy, are first cousins of the ill man. He also has many other relatives throughout Carroll county.

Miss Hilda Haines entertained her friend, Master Aubrey Conaway, one evening last week.

Mrs. Joseph Pickett and son William, of Winfield, were recent guests of relatives in this vicinity.

Master Ernie Conaway spent Thursday evening with little Masters Melvin and Truman Haines, of near this place.

Miss Evelyn Grimes called on Miss Cora M. Conaway Saturday morning.

Miss Emma Grimes spent a short while recently with Miss Mildred Bowers.

Mr. and Mrs. John Miller spent Friday evening with their daughter, Mrs. Harry Robertson, of Westminster.

Mrs. Louise Maring and son Earle, of near this place, will move to their new home in Oakland about April 1st.

Mrs. James Miller spent Sunday afternoon with Mrs. E. E. Hood.

Mr. Dewey Pickett called on Mr. James Miller on Sunday last.

Mr. Morris Haines entertained Rev. C. Amos Reynolds on last Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Welsh and children, Mary, Doris and Robert were guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Miller recently.

Mrs. B. N. Penn and daughter Melvie, were Sunday guests of Mrs. Edward Barnes, of near Winfield.

BLOOM

It seems a little like spring now and the roads are in a bad condition.

Mr. Harry Carr has moved to his new home at Gist.

The funeral of Mrs. Ekie Horton was largely attended and we have great sympathy for the bereaved parent and family.

Those who visited Mr. Edgar Barr on Sunday last were: Granville Carr, Zolen and James Carr, Denton Haines, Curtis Barnes and others.

Misses Treva and Hazel Haines, of Jordan's Retreat visited their aunts, Mrs. Bloom and Mrs. Wagner, on Saturday last.

Mr. Aubrey Wagner spent from Saturday until Monday with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Wagner.

Those who spent Tuesday evening with Misses Hollis and Rhoda Wagner were: Misses Mamie and Ivie Knauff, Jessie Barber and Leaby Aldridge.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Wagner visited Mr. and Mrs. Henry Knauff who is still on the sick list, and also Mrs. Ekie Myerly and daughter Louise, Mrs. Ray Poole and others.
