THE STREET PROBLEM IN BUSINESS CENTER

The good roads problem has two phases, the improvement of country roads, and traffic conditions in town, city, and village centers. The former is important, as there can be no economical farm product distribution without good country roads. But with the modern motor truck grinding out the surface, the problem of the centers of town and village traffic is a perplexing one.

Motorists find the worst roads right in the thickly settled portions of cities and towns. Heavy motor trucks and fast running of automobiles is making mischief. The trucks are economical and will be used more and more. They will draw their big loads from all the surrounding country. The town or small city that thinks it can not afford solid paving will pay some heavy repair bills.

The small village where costly paving seems out of the question, can't meet modern conditions with thin and sandy gravels. If it is maintaining a little business center that is a heap of mud and dust, it is disgusting every visitor. More money put into a solid crushed rock surface would save many dribleits of taxation.

There are many quite small towns that are getting sick of these conditions, and see no economy in tearing up their central street sections every few years. They are trying out paving brick or wood blocks over small sections having most strain.

Such paving is the finest advertising. It spreads an impression of progress. A small town acquires a city air when it gets a little substantial paving, and a cross roads village begins to look like a business center Slight impressions draw trade, and when a town gives an impression of enterprise in this way, it is sure to draw trade from a long distance.

THE AUTOMOBILE LEARNERS

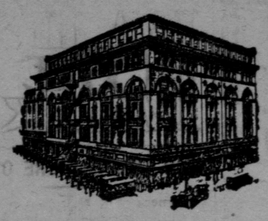

The lower price for automobiles is multiplying the machines and many learners are on the road taking lessons in driving.

The most conservative citizen may be transformed when he first gets behind the steering wheel. Previously he has demanded jail sentences for fast driving. But in the car he fails to realize how fast he goes. The process of stopping and starting looks difficult and he is fearful of stalling his engine. He is apt to keep going in a mix-up of teams and people, when he ought to stop and let the tangle clear up.

Many people who have ridden bicycles get certain elements of driving very quickly. After they have gone 25 miles, they can make an excellent bluff at steering a car in the open country. This gives them premature confidence and boldness. They think their education is complete, and go banging through the next town which teams tied at hitching posts, carriages going both ways, and bicycles, children, and elderly people on the streets. Only by a miracle of deftness can the instructor save them.

The difficult thing is not learning to steer on a straight track. That is nothing. It is the quick, unconscious shifting of gears and changing of speeds and directions to get around in towns. It takes time to acquire this skill. Those who think too soon that they have it, are likely to find their mistake to their cost.

The position of instructor for a garage or selling agency is responsible. The teacher needs to impress on the learner that he is in control of a machine of whose power and destructiveness, he has little realization. He needs to caution him when he sees trouble ahead, and not let him get up to his neck in a tight place. There is too much of a tendency to place immature fellows in this important post.

THE STORE THAT GETS THE NEW STYLES FIRST

When you come to Baltimore to shop—as you probably do at intervals during the year—you will naturally feel safest in the store whose stocks are always fresh.

It is a matter of pride with us—
—and a matter of principle as well—
not to allow old-style or shopworn merchandise to accumulate.

Periodically, we hold special sales in which this merchandise is disposed of at ridiculously low prices. We would rather give it away than permit it to remain in stock.
As a result, whatever is shown to you as new at Hochschild, Kohn & Co's is new.

The woman who does not keep in close touch with the styles can buy here with perfect safety—and our people will be glad to give helpful advice and assistance to anyone who is in doubt as to what to choose.

GAVE HIS FRIENDS THE DOUBLE CROSS

Commenting on the retirement of the Democratic state chairman in New York, the "Evening Post" remarks upon the failure of President Wilson to give Chairman Osborne any adequate support. "Once in the Presidency", says the "Post," Mr. Wilson's interest in the rehabilitation of the party in New York waned very rapidly." This is by no means surprising to those who understand the Wilson habit of mind. Once in office, it is the President's general custom to disregard much, if not all, that has characterized his campaign declarations. The manner in which he has kicked holes in the Baltimore platform is sufficient evidence on this point. But as another election approaches Mr. Wilson is showing more interest in the party in New York. From indifference he is becoming very different. But the damage has already been done, and probably beyond repair. He cannot again appeal to the independent Democrats of New York as he did in 1912; and most assuredly he cannot successfully court the favor of Tammany. When he failed to support Chairman Osbourne, he made it certain that the Democrats of New York will not adequately support him.

Nobody at Washington—or elsewhere, for that matter—yet knows just why the President took the U-boat message to Congress. He accomplished nothing by it that could not have been procured by the publication of his note to Berlin. He asked for no action by Congress, not even for approval of what he had done. The days immediately preceding his going to the Capitol contained no inkling of such a purpose—though there were the familiar pictures of the President burning the midnight oil over the phraseology of the note. All at once he determines to go to Congress. Why? No explanation has yet been found that does not run, in the last analysis, into the President's own personal and political necessities.

Secretary Baker declares that the services of his chief of staff, General Hugh Scott, are "eminently satisfactory." Considering Baker's limited experience as a war secretary, General Scott is apt to consider himself damned with faint praise.

After denouncing the young men who won't enlist, many men decide not to go to the primary election, because they can't miss the club.

A MARKED DIFFERENCE

There is a marked difference between the language which Mr. Wilson employs in his discussions with and of the German government and the language which he uses to and of Venustiano Carranza.

There is also a marked difference between the geographic conditions which relate to the Germans and the Mexicans and the United States.

Between us and the Germans roll three thousand miles of blue ocean on which floats the British navy as our sure defence. Between us and Mexico flows the Rio Grande, along which is strung a tenuous thread of American troops.

The President's attitude in the two instances reminds us of the "self-made heroes" whom the cartoonists depict. To the powerful Germans, three thousand miles away and on the other side of the British fleet, Mr. Wilson uses harsh and peremtory words. To Carranza, just over the river, he uses honeyed language, enters upon negotiations and generally displays the utmost consideration.

We wonder why.

Two political sensations that were sprung in the State of Utah lately have brought consternation to the Democrats. Mr. N. L. Morris, a delegate to the Progressive State Convention, startled the delegates with the statement that so far as fundamental principles were concerned, the Republicans and progressives stood on common ground. He returned to the Republican camp and was accompanied by many other members of the Progressive party. He was elected a delegate to the Republican Judicial Convention, in which he participated.

The other sensation was the announcement of former State Senator Bamberger, a life long Democrat, that he is not only opposed to the removal of the tariff on sugar but recognizes the need of a tariff "on more things than one to protect the farmers, manufactures, and workingmen of this country." Senator Bamberger is a prominent business man in Utah, and was assured of the Democratic nomination for the United States Senate if he would accept it. He declined, evidently because he was no longer in sympathy with the policy of his party.

The Bryan family seems to be nearing the end of its road in Nebraska politics. Brother Charlie was denied the nomination for Governor which he wanted from the Democrats and Brother Bill turned up as tail-ender on the ticket for delegates to the St. Louis convention. And, as a means of rubbing it in, Henry Ford, who stands for the Bryan policy of pacifism, was a drawing card in the Republican primaries held at the same time.

THE EXPECTED HAS HAPPENED AGAIN

The issuing of bonds in time of peace for the purpose of paying governmental expenses is purely a Democratic procedure. Cleveland did it; and now Wilson will do it.

The army bill which has just passed the Senate contains a provision for the expenditure of fifteen million dollars for the establishment of water-power plants for the manufacture of nitrates to be used in the production of munitions and for fertilizers. The money is to be procured by the issuance and sale of that sum in Canal bonds.

The Canal, it will be remembered, was constructed at a cost running into the hundreds of millions and was paid for, largely, out of the current receipts of the Treasury as provided in the wise revenue laws for which the Republican party stood sponser. In effect, we Republicans built the Canal out the small change in the nation's purse.

But the Democrats, to find fifteen millions, have to issue bonds. A bond issue was confidently predicted as one of the certain results of a Democratic administration—and sure enough, it is to occur. It is the happening of the expected.
