WATCH COUNTRY NEWSPAPER

Herman Rosenthal, advertising manager for Sears, Roebuck & Company, of Chicago, recently told the members of the American Add Club one of the methods by which that company extended its trade. He said: "We have a bureau whose duty it is to read, each week, the country newspapers from all over the country. There is not a paper of any consequence in our trade territory that our bureau does not get. This bureau looks over these papers, and when we find a town where the merchants are not advertising in the local paper we immediately flood that territory with our literature. It always brings results far in excess of the same effort put forth in territory where the local merchants all the time use their local paper."

ENTHUSIASTIC GATHERING OF SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS

The growing increase in Sunday School work and modern methods of carrying it on was shown in a striking way by the large attendance, and the interest shown at the annual convention at the Carroll County Sunday School Association held at Leister's Church near Westminster on September 21st.

Ministers, superintendents and delegates were present from every corner of the county. Far away points like Sykesville, Mt. Airy, Taneytown and Hampstead were largely represented. Ministers of all denomination took part in the discussions, and the meeting was a live one from start to finish.

Rev. E. Morris Furgusson, an expert in Sunday School matters who has been recently engaged as General Secretary of the Maryland State Sunday School Association, and Miss Maggie Wilson, State Superintendent of primary and elementary work were present and greatly helped by their wise counsel and strong addresses.

The large attendance showed an interesting contrast with the convention held seven years ago when but two or three schools were represented, and only a handfull of people were present.

Carroll County is making up along the lines of Sunday School work, and is making great strides.

One hundred dollars is contributed annually by the County Association to the State to aid in establishing Sunday Schools and bettering conditions in counties not so well organized as Carroll.

The County Association two years ago took a very active part in the campaign to make Carroll County dry, and will be one of the leading factors in the fight to keep the saloons out this fall.

Acting on the suggestion of the State Secretary, a superintendent was appointed for each of the fourteen election districts of the county, whose duty it will be to visit the schools in his neighborhood, to help them in the work as far as possible, and to secure once a year a statistical report from all the schools in his district.

A full list of officers and superintendents of the various departments were elected and is given below.

Carroll County is now one of the best organized Counties in the state. Much of the credit for this is due to the Pres. Mr. G. W. Yeiser, who has been untiring in his efforts to build up the work, and who has personally visited most of the schools in the county.

The resignation of the Secretary, Miss Adda L. Trump who has served the Union faithfully and well for many years, was accepted with great regret. Mr. George Mather, of Westminster was chosen to fill this position.

Special emphasis was laid on the State Sunday School Convention which will be held this year in Westminster on October 16, 17 and 18. Speakers of national reputation will be at this gathering, and all Carroll County Sunday Schools are urged to take advantage of this opportunity to come in touch with leading Sunday Schools Workers.

A large exhibit of Sunday School helps and literature of every kind is being arranged for in connection with the convention. On Tuesday night October 17, there will be a banquet in Firemen's Hall for male and female adult classes, which is expected will attract several hundred. Dr. Pierce, one of the leading adult workers of the country will speak at this banquet. Full particulars regarding this and other features of this convention will be given later.

It is the purpose of the Carrol County Association to hold at least one Sunday School rally in every election district of the county during the coming year. Pastors and superintendents are asked to aid in these meetings, and to confer as early as convenient with the president and secretary.

The next convention of the association will be held on the first Thursday in September, 1917, at a place to be announced later.

The following is a list of officers and superintendents:

CLEANLINESS MUST BE FIRST

Success With Dairy Depends Greatly Upon Attention to Details in and Around Barn.

In order that milk may be sanitary and healthy the cows must be healthy, clean and well cared for, and must not be given feeds that will produce objectionable flavors in the milk; barns must be well lighted, ventilated and kept clean and be roomy enough to prevent undue crowding of cows; barnyards must be kept reasonably clean, and should be well drained so as to insure, as far as possible, cleanliness of cow; manure must not accumulate near or be piled against the barn; the floor of the milk room should be of concrete, the room being well lighted, ventilated and screened; utensils such as cans, bottles and milk pails must be washed and scalded after each use, and all tinware must be free from open seams and rust; water supply for cows and for cooling and cleaning purposes must be clean and free from contamination; steam or hot water should be used for cleaning and sterilizing utensils.—Clemson College Bulletin.

WHITEWASH THAT WILL LAST

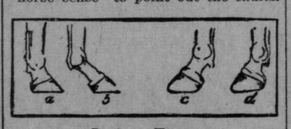

Formula for Making Covering Used by Government on Lighthouses Maintained Along Coast.

To make the whitewash which has been used for more than ten years in the White House at Washington and on the lighthouses maintained by the government along the coasts, take a half bushel of unslaked lime and slake it with boiling water. Cover during the process to keep in the steam. Strain the liquid through a fine sieve or strainer and add to it a peck of salt, which previously has been dissolved in warm water; 3 pounds of ground rice boiled to a thin paste and stirred in while hot; ½ pound Spanish whiting; and 1 pound of glue previously dissolved by soaking in water and then hanging over hot water. This is best accomplished by putting in a small pail and hanging in a larger one filled with water. Add 5 gallons of hot water to the mixture, stir well, and let stand a few days covered. It should be applied hot, for which purpose it can be kept in a portable furnace.

CORRECT TYPES OF PASTERNS

It Does Not Require Much "Horse Sense" to Point Out Faults as Illustrated Herewith.

When the difference between good and bad pasterns and good and bad feet is as clearly evident as in those shown here it does not require much "horse sense" to point out the faults.

Pastern Types.

"A" is a good example of a pastern that is too upright and too straight. In "B" the pastern goes to the other extreme, being too sloping. The correct type of the forefoot is seen in "C," while "D" shows the correct type of hind foot.

ERADICATE THE HESSIAN FLY

Pointers From Expert of Missouri College of Agriculture—Starve the Pest, He Says.

(By T. J. TALBERT, Missouri College of Agriculture.)

Plow early.
Bury the fly.
Destroy all volunteer wheat.
Sow on or soon after fly-free date.
Use oats or rye as fall pasture.

The fly can't eat oats and it cares little for rye.

Deep plowing of wheat stubble buries the fly and a good harrowing makes it harder for him to escape.

Starve the fly till about the middle of October then sow and you'll have no Hessian fly next year if all your neighbors do the same. If one of them sows early or lets volunteer wheat stand, his fly crop will probably get your wheat next year.

BARN MANURE BREEDS FLIES

Unsightly Heap Should be Removed to Garden or Field Where Value Is Appreciated.

Although a most excellent fertilizer, there is nothing that will breed flies more quickly or certainly than stable manure; and as flies carry disease, then the unsightly heap should be removed to the garden or field where its value is appreciated.

People who own automobiles don't always have to buy fruits and vegetables. Some of them find plenty on dark nights out in the suburbs.

It is confidently promised that the noble Carranza troops will start in pursuit of Villa when they get new pom-poms to put on top of their caps.

There does not seem to be so much point in that old joke about the farmer's whiskers as he dashes by you in his new eight cylinder touring car.

BY CONSENT

By FLORA A. MONTY.

Eloise did not dress to suit her type. She suited her type to her dress, and thereby kept her friends guessing as to her moods and manners.

In the days of her small girlhood the Shelbys had lived next door to her at Yorktown, and had later moved to Norfolk. Now Eloise was making her first visit in many years to Miriam Shelby, and instead of being entertained, owing to the piquancy of her ways and dress, she was herself the entertainer.

Big, breezy, man-of-the-world Tim Darcy invited her to be his guest at the races within half an hour after he met her. Miriam's brother, Dick, told her about hearing Darcy remark to Edgar Herdon that he was going to have "some looker" at the races tomorrow. "Drop around to the box and meet her."

In answer to the invitation Herdon "dropped around" during a lull in the activities, and found big Tim, for once in his life, ill at ease and obviously anxious. The girl who was his guest was "some looker," round-eyed, adorable, timidly endeavoring not to appear shocked at the dreadful spectacle of horse races and betting. Dick Shelby, who had made it a point to be there, realized that she was having the time of her life in playing the unsophisticated, sheltered damsel that she appeared today.

Herdon, who, although a close friend of Darcy, was, strangely enough, a man of the old-school type, and his heart warmed to the quaint maiden he had just met. She refreshed his soul, and he promptly begged her to attend a studio tea that he was giving on Saturday to a group of dignified friends of his mother and his stately married sister.

On Saturday the older guests assembled early, and to them Herdon boasted of his find, a dainty, fragile blossom of a girl, absolutely foreign to the usual type of society butterfly, and all innocence and unworldliness.

When she entered everyone gasped, for a golden, glittering siren glided in, strikingly arrayed in next season's style. Her dress was of shimmering golden silk, smartly short. Around the ankles of her silken hose were embroidered tiny green serpents, and her left wrist was inclosed by a bracelet wrought in the semblance of a serpent. Her hat was the last word in Paris style, and accentuated the darkness of her alluring eyes.

The bored, indifferent male members of the party nearly annihilated each other in the effort to devote themselves to her, in spite of the frigid manner of the ladies present. Dick Shelby kept in the background and made no effort to talk to her. But when she arose to go, he, with quiet assurance, presented himself as her escort. For a moment she hesitated, and then, bowing accepted his arm.

"Now look here, Eloise! You are a stunner, and you know it, and you've got everyone up in the air about you, but there is no sense in making people think you a regular Lorelei, and that's the impression you gave them today. A joke is all right, but I'm not going to have that kind of a notion spread about you. If you're doing it for excitement, let me provide you with some of the real kind for tomorrow."

"All right, Dick! What time shall it be, and what shall we do?"

"Good!" was the response, so fervent that it startled her. "Ten, sharp, in the morning. As to what—that is the excitement. You are not to know until the time comes."

Promptly at ten Dick swung his runabout around to the veranda, and was pleased to find Eloise already there, trim, quiet and more entrancing than ever, in a simple tailored suit that made her look like a seventeen-year-old schoolgirl.

Dick's satisfied gaze enveloped her like a caress. Eloise felt herself yielding to the insistence of it. As the car sped away, and along a cool country road, she tried to recover her poise by monopolizing the conversation.

Suddenly he stopped the car. They were near the entrance to a lane that led to a country church.

"I'm glad you are fittingly dressed for the trip, Eloise."

"The trip?" she questioned, puzzled.

"Our wedding trip," he explained.

"Our what!" Her eloquence failed her.

"We're going to be married, you know. I've arranged everything. The minister is up there at the church now, and after he's said the words we'll jaunt along to our cottage at the Dells."

"Dick Shelby, you despicable creature!" Her wrath blazed white. "So this is your boasted excitement! A cheap kind, I call it. I'll never marry you, and I want you to take me back, instantly!" Her anger beat against him as fruitlessly as wind against a rock.

Eloise jumped from the car. "I'll walk back," she announced, with scorn supreme, as she noticed him follow her.

Just then a placid cow ambled slowly down the lane and into the road beside her.

"Oh, Dick, Dick!" she screamed, and flung herself into his arms. "Dick, don't let it hurt me."

When a man holds tight in his embrace the girl whom he adores words are unnecessary if there be a responsive chord in her heart.

There has been nothing conceived in recent years that means more to the Farmer and the Town Man than the Empire - System - of - Pipeless - Heating

How often have you said, "Gee! I wish I had a Heating Plant in my house, but I can't afford one." Now here is a Heater that is within reach of everyone, no matter what his circumstances may be. One that is guaranteed to be absolutely satisfactory in every particular. Don't get the idea that because it is cheap it is inferior in quality. Such is not the case. Every part of these heaters are made of the finest material, being made by the manufacturer of the celebrated line of Red Cross Stoves and Ranges.

Now I don't contend that the Pipeless Furnace is a whole lot better than a Steam or Hot Water Plant, yet comparing it with either of these it has some advantages over them.

First: The cost of installing the Pipeless Furnace is only half of that of what either the steam or the hot water job would cost.

Second: It is not necessary to go to the extra expense of putting water in your house.

Third: There are no radiators to take up a space that you would like to have for some piece of furniture.

Fourth: No tearing up of floors or tearing out of partitions, as it is only necessary to cut one opening in the floor for the main and only register.

Fifth: It positively does not heat the cellar, vegetables and fruit may be stored alongside of it without danger of spoiling.

Sixth: It is a ventilating system as well as a heating one. Pure, fresh, warm air which is perfectly healthy.

There is such a vast difference between a Pipeless Heater and Stoves that there is really no comparison at all.

You can run one of the Empire Pipeless Heating Systems on less fuel than you would require for stoves. It does away with the carrying of coal and ashes through the house, thus eliminating a whole lot of unnecessary dust and dirt. In the use of stoves there is always more or less smoke and gas in the house which is very unhealthy, even dangerous. There is no additional space taken up in the room, the ceilings are not disfigured by cutting holes in them, there is no unsightly pipe in the room and the wall paper is not made dingy by coal gas. It saves work, for it requires no more attention than one stove, yet it heats the whole house. It will soon pay for itself in the saving of fuel.

The Empire Pipeless Furnace heats the whole house from one register. It ventillates as well as heats. It soon pays for itself in the saving of fuel. It distributes pure, warm even heat to every nook and corner of the house. It can be installed in houses with either high or low cellars. And considering the Price it is something that you cannot afford to do without.

Burns Hard or Soft Coal, Wood, Coke or Natural Gas

Every one guaranteed satisfactory. I would be pleased to measure your house and give you an estimate of what one of these Empire Pipeless House Warming Systems would cost you.
