Dear Sir,

Mr. King handed us your letter of Oct. 31st, 1882 in which you said you had mislaid the Release in the matter of the settlement of the estate of Mr. Chester and asked that another be sent you. You said that you had "discovered that it was all right, only needed explanation", and that you preferred that the new one "should be more plain in its meaning".

We noted this very reasonable request but explained to your nephew that for the sake of uniformity you would oblige the executors by executing it in its original form as you now understood its meaning. The new release is returned to us this morning with the simple announcement that you "decline to sign it".

Will you not prepare a release based on our form setting forth the facts as you think best and after signing & acknowledging it return to us at your earliest convenience.

We have sent you a receipt for the real estate tax paid on your account and as is customary in business transactions with us when money is paid for another have counted this payment as cash received by you. If you prefer to be "more exact" as you say and give a history
