SIDE TWO

am afraid of the fatigue of the trip for him. The family matters here are so straight and comfortable that there is nothing to prevent my having him if he is desirous to come.
Rob has not yet returned from his visit I do not know whether he will be on the boat to day or not. We have all of the rest of the families at home now, Cornelias family are staying with us, their cook having gone to town for a few days, so you may know we are having a good time with the baby etc. The weather is cold as I suppose it is with you, and we find fires very comfortable.
I am glad that Han had her visit to town last week, and hope that she is not any worse for it. The month is slipping away very quickly, you have not much more time left before your summer trip. Do you know whether the piano has been taken away from the Spruce Street house yet? If it has not you had better give them a stir about it. Mary sent to have it done, it came from Schomackers, and they promised to send for it last Monday.
I wish you could have come down at this time, the leaves are out just about enough for you, and every thing looks very sweet, we must only hope that you can do it another year.
Now I must say good bye to you with much love to Han and the boys We will find a corner for Herbert when he is ready to come down to us.

Your loving sister
Mary H. Murray
