The KITCHEN CABINET

Teach me to dilute my work with play, to brighten my seriousness with jest and never take myself so seriously that I crowd from my life the joys and pleasures that by heritage are mine.

GOOD GERMAN DISHES.

The appetizing dishes that our German cooks prepare should be more generally known for many of them would be served often.

Almond Rings.—Mix together three-fourths of a pound of butter, half a pound of powdered sugar, the yolks of three eggs and a pound of sifted flour. Roll thin and cut into strips and form in rings; dip these in white of egg, then in chopped almonds, sugar and cinnamon, mix and bake in a moderate oven. Keep in a cool place.

Sauer Braten.—Cover a piece of stewing beef with vinegar and let stand 48 hours; drain, lard it and sprinkle with spice and fry in hot drippings. When browned well all over, put into the kettle with a lemon rind, two sliced carrots and two leeks, add a little hot water and simmer until the meat is tender, strain, thicken the liquor left, with flour, add enough lemon juice or vinegar to make it tart. Serve with the meat and sauerkraut.

Beet Fritters.—Mash five beets to a pulp, add the yolks of four eggs, beaten with two tablespoonfuls of cream and two tablespoonfuls of flour. Add the grated rind of a lemon, sugar and nutmeg to taste; mix and shape into small cakes and saute in a little butter. Serve with tart fruit as a garnish, such as cherries or apples.

Roast Goose With Stuffing.—A six-month-old goose will require no parboiling, an older one should be parboiled. Scrub the outside thoroughly with a vegetable brush and soda water, using care not to break the skin. Wipe dry, rub the inside of the goose with the cut side of an onion, dust it with sage, salt and pepper, dredge with flour and stuff it, cook in a covered roaster. When tender serve with gooseberry jelly and garnish with cooked apple rings with a stewed prune in the center of each slice. Stuff with a pound each of raisins, blanched and chopped almonds, bread crumbs, with the goose liver cooked and finely chopped, two teaspoonfuls of salt, one minced onion, a tablespoonful of powdered sage and a cupful of melted butter. Do not pack the stuffing in but fill lightly, sew up the goose and put into the roaster.

GIVE EVERY MAN DUE CREDIT

Boost That Has a String to It, No Matter for What Reason, Is Mean and Unworthy.

"Oh, yes, he is a fine fellow, but do you know who his father is?"

You have heard it said many times, but could anything be meaner?

When a man goes wrong his sisters and his brothers, and his children, particularly, should not be made to bear the brunt of his misdeeds.

Each and all of us have a hard enough time keeping in the straight and narrow path without a double handicap in the shape of our weak relatives.

Give every man credit for the real good he does.

Don't limit your praise with "that is more than could be expected considering his parentage."

Be charitable and fair enough to forget the drawbacks and give your compliments without disparagement.

Every family has its black sheep, if the truth were known, and would give anything in this world to save the erring one.

As you want to shield the sinner in your own fold, forget the sinning in the flock next door.

It is a rule which works both ways. Give every man full praise without a handicap.—Chicago Examiner.

The Best Philanthropy.

Be sure that you give the poor the aid they most need, though it be your example which leaves them far behind. If you give money, spend yourself with it, and do not merely abandon it to them. We make curious mistakes sometimes. Often the poor man is not so cold and hungry as he is dirty and ragged and gross. . . . There are a thousand hacking at the branches of evil to one who is striking at the root, and it may be that he who bestows the largest amount of time and money on the needy is doing the most by his mode of life to produce that misery which he strives in vain to relieve. It is the pious slave breeder devoting the proceeds of every tenth slave to buy a Sunday's liberty for the rest.—Thoreau.

Chance for Heroism.

"But, Miss Grabcoin, I cannot live wizout you."

"If that is the case, my dear count, will you oblige me by going to the front and dying for your country?"

DISEASE CURED BY MACHINE

Apparatus for the Treatment of Cardiospasm Is Invented by Eminent Surgeon.

An eminent surgeon, connected with a world-renowned clinic, has developed an apparatus for treating persons afflicted with cardiospasm, which effects a cure so suddenly that to the layman it appears little short of miraculous. Cardiospasm is a disease in which a contraction occurs at the point where the esophagus joins the stomach, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Normally when food enters the lower portion of the esophagus a muscular ring, previously closed, relaxes and allows the food to enter the stomach. In this disease it does not open up normally, and the food is retained above the ring. In some cases a huge pouch is formed by the accumulation of food, while the patient slowly starves to death.

The device which treats the disease so successfully is an expanding dilator, which, after being inserted to the contracted point, is distended with water to a point where it paralyzes the muscle. A single treatment or, in rare instances, a few treatments, completely relieves the condition. No pain accompanies the use of the dilator and no anesthetic is given.

Grand Opera Climax.

Little Isabelle is very fond of music and never misses an opportunity to attend a concert or hear music in any form. One afternoon, some days ago her mother took the little girl to call on a friend who owns a music box. For the kidling's benefit the music machine was started and the hostess went through her list of records from "It's a Long Way to Tipperary" and "Take a Little Tip From Father," to "The Jewel Song" from "Faust." The last record was the "Miserere" from "Il Trovatore," and as everyone knows it is a tuneful selection in spite of the mournful name. The grand climax of the selection, with all the opera stars singing their best, appealed to little Isabelle especially and she sat with wide-open eyes and ears until the last note died away. Then she cried: "Gee, mamma! That sounds just like a glorified cat-fight."—Brockton Enterprise.

Work of Japanese Silkworms.

An improvement in the manner of hatching silkworms has been recently perfected by Japanese growers. Egg cards are immersed in diluted hydrochloric acid for five to ten hours just before they are hatched. In a fortnight or 12 days after the immersion the eggs are perfectly hatched, and worms that are stronger and more healthy than those hatched in any other way may be seen coming out of the shells. The silk produced by the worms thus hatched is better and longer than that produced in any other way. It has been stated that the silk produced by the worms bred in the newly invented way measured 1,200 feet, whereas the thread produced by the worms hatched in the ordinary way measures only 700 feet at the longest.
