A Macedonion Missionary lectured at Pleasant Grove on Tuesday night to an appreciative audience. He is one of three Macedonians in the United States, having been here for twelve years, being educated in different colleges. He was from a nobleman's family and lived in a palace. After being converted by Missionaries from this country, his family was expelled from the Greek Catholic Church. His father would have killed him had he remained in that country. He spoke of the beautiful country, it climate, customs, religion and many other things making it a most interesting lecture. His narrative was part humorous and part pathetic. After learning of his great sacrifice to become a Christian, being banished from home friends and a fortune of millions how thankful we should be to live in a land of such opportunites and freedom, blessed with the Bible and religion. Macedonia is a heathen country, going backward instead of forward. A thousand years behind its age. Superstitious, idolatrous. Population 12 million, 600,000 square miles. Greek Catholic churches responisible for heathenish conditions existing there.

Any person may consider it a great privilege to have this missionary. He also sang in Macedonio language. An offering was given him. Mr. and Mrs. Ulysses Shipley entertained him.

On Sunday a jury of inquisition was summoned, sworn, and viewed the body of the deceased. The inquest was held and a large number of witnesses examined at Sykesville on Wednesday afternoon. The facts brought out at the inquest were in substance as at first reported. A number of colored men were on the street, some of whom engaged in a quarrel. Lewis Gosnell was attacked by Gus Dorsey. They clinched and fell with Dorsey on top. Philip Gosnell, brother of Lewis, who was in a nearby alley with The Cook, ran round the corner, and fired four shots, three of which entered the back of Dorsey, who rose and ran to Mr. Hobbs' barber shop, with Gosnell chasing him to the door of the barber shop. He then disappeared in the darkness.

Dr. D. B. Sprecher, who attended the wounded man, also performed the autopsy and testified at the inquest describing the course of the three 38 calibre bullets that penetrated the body, and that death was due to shock and internal hemmorhage. The verdict of the jury was that Dorsey came to his death from the shots fired by Gosnell and that the killing was unjustifiable. From the evidence secured at the inquest it was found that a number of colored men were disorderly prior to the shooting and disturbing the peace. Warrants were issued for their arrest and each waived the right of jury trial and submitted to be tried before Albert M. Musgrove, Justice , who had acted as coroner. Theo. alias Howard Cook, Lewis Gosnell, and Isaac Robinson pleaded guilty of disorderly conduct and disturbing the peace; Nicholson Grooms pleaded not guilty and after a hearing was adjudged guilty. Gosnell was sentenced to pay a fine and costs, and Robinson and Cook each sentenced to sixty days in the House of Correction.

State's Attorney Seabrook was present at the inquest, and the hearings that followed.

THERE WAS A LIMIT

"It's no use," sighs the nature wizard. "I may as well give up." "What is bothering you?" we ask sympathetically. "I got started a few years ago on a whim of mine. I took a head of cabbage and crossed it with a white potato and grew eyes on it; then I crossed that with a cornstalk and grew ears on it; then I crossed that with a squash and grew a neck on it; then I crossed that with a cocanut and grew hair on it, but hanged if I can figure out what to do for a nose and mouth!"

A DIFFERENT RULE

The Wilsonian view is that if Germany performs any overt act against us calling for a declaration of war, all neutral countries should follow our lead. But if any neutral country resorts to arms because of the sinking of its vessels without warning, the United States will remain passive. It is not to be wondered at that the President stand did not receive the unequivocal indorsement of neutral powers.

HOME GARDENS AND ROTATIONS

ROTATION OF CROPS ADVOCATED FOR IMPROVEMENT OF SOIL FERTILITY.

SYSTEMATIC PLANTING PLANS

Large Amount Of Food Products May Be Had From a Small Area Of Land.

College Park, Feb. 15.—In his work with the various County Demonstration Agents, S. B. Shaw, Specialist in Horticultural Extension, has had an excellent opportunity to make a careful study of home gardens. In a recent article on this subject, Mr. Shaw says: "The advantages of having a garden from which an abundance of fruits and vegetables can be had are well-known. In some instances, however, the land used in the production of these crops does not yield as abundantly as it might if the garden was planned so that every part would be growing some crop each month in the year. To bring about this condition it is necessary, first to lay out the garden in such a way that the greatest amount of work can be done in the shortest time, and then practice a system of crop rotation.

"Sometimes fruit trees, shrubbery or flowers are planted promiscuously throughout the garden. This practice has its disadvantages, in that it is difficult to plow, harrow and cultivate around trees and shrubbery without injuring them to some extent.

"Few people realize the large amount of food products and income that can be derived from the systematic planting and cultivation of a small area of land, when devoted to the growing of garden crops. Too often the planting ceases with the first crops sown, and when these have matured, the fertile soil is either allowed to produce a magnificent crop of weeds, or else remains idle until the following season.

"The systematic rotation of farm crops have been advocated for a number of years, the principal end in view being an improvement of soil fertility. A well-planned rotation of garden crops brings about this same result, and in addition accomplishes two other purposes. It affords a greater amount of food supplies for a longer period of time, and, to a certain extent, it aids in the control of certain insect and disease pests.

"As a rule, most insects and diseases attacking garden crops can be controlled by the application of suitable poisons and chemicals in the form of 'spray materials.' However, some of these troubles, particularly those diseases occurring in the soil, are hard to combat in this way. Rotation often proves the only remedy in instances of this kind, hence the advantage of having a well-planned system of growing the different crops.

"Insects and diseases thriving on plants belonging to a certain family or class of plants will often find the plants of a different family entirely unsuited to their use. For instance, beets, parsnips and turnips are seldom affected with the same troubles that prove destructive to cucumbers, cantaloupes and watermelons, and vice versa. Here, too, a carefully planned rotation often proves an effective means of control for various garden troubles."

MANAGEMENT OF BRED SOWS.

College Park, Feb. 15.—In a recent article written especially for the County Demonstration Agents for use in connection with the local Boys' Agricultural Clubs throughout the State, S. S. Buckley, Animal Industry Extension Specialist, treats this subject very thoroughly. He says, in part: "Get acquainted with the sow. Look her over often and carefully and be sure that she is free from lice. If she is kept with other hogs, they must be free from lice. Use crude oil or coal oil and lard about the ears, on the inside of front legs, on the sides of the head and down the back. Don't give the lice a show to live.

"Keep the pens and the yards clean. Have dry bedding in the houses. Wash the feeding troughs and keep them clean at all times.

Feeding.

"The sow is being kept to produce pigs. You are feeding the sow really for the good of those pigs. If the sow gets too fat, the pigs will get too fat, and they will die at farrowing time. If the sow gets poor, thin and weak, the pigs will be weak, and they will die at birth or shortly after.

"You must keep the sow fed well with food that gives strength, and which can be used to make the bodies of these pigs strong without becoming fat. Corn or cornmeal by itself is not the kind of feed, because it makes fat very easily and makes heat. Bran, beans, peas, alfalfa and clover hay, meat scrap, fish scrap and tankage make hard, lean meat and give strength. Grass pastures are good and help to keep the bowels in proper condition. In winter time grazing on rye, wheat or clover is good, but if the sow cannot graze, she should have some sliced potatoes, beets or other root crop to help regulate the condition of the bowels. Keep the sow in good condition without allowing her to become fat. As the time approaches for her to farrow feed her plenty of grain for strength and roots for regulators.

NEGLECTED COLDS GROW WORSE

A cough that racks and irritates the throat may lead to a serious chronic cough, if neglected. The healing pine balsams in Dr. Bell's Pine Tar Honey—Nature's own remedy—will soothe and relieve the irritation, breathing will be easier, and the antiseptic properties will kill the germ which retarded healing.
