Jesse Stultz, Pennsylvania avenue, Westminster, says: "The action of my kidneys was irregular and the secretions were unnatural. My back ached and I had pains in my side. Doan's Kidney Pills helped me at once. I continued using them and soon felt much better."

The above statement was given on May 13, and on August 9, 1916, Mr. Stultz said: "Doan's Kidney Pills are a wonderful kidney medicine. I never have to take a kidney remedy now because of the excellent work of Doan's Kidney Pills."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Stultz has twice publicly recommended.

SHOULD CAN DENMAN

The way to have settled the Deenman- Goethals controversy was to have Secretary McAdoo step in and can his California satellite. The row would have immediately ceased; the Crown Prince would have received the credit for it, and this would have strengthened his campaign for the nomination in 1920. Sacrificing a follower would have been the Wilson way, which appears to have been cruelly successful.

We don't hear so much about "bloated bond-holders' and "coupon-clippers," now that there are more than 4,000,000 of us. —Oregon City Enterprise.

REPUBLICANS LAY ASIDE PARTISANSHIP

The fifty-three Senators who voted for the creation of a joint Congressional committee on the experitures of the war were a majority of twenty-two. Fifteen of them are Democrats, thirty-eight of them are Republicans. The thirty-one votes in opposition were all cast by Democrats. This is not a partisan matter; the committee. Yet it is worth noting that every Republican who voted was in favor of the committee, and every vote against it was cast by a Democrat. The vote indicates that the Republicans of the Senate are in favor of lending to the President the complete co-operation of their party in the strenuous work of carrying on a foreign war, that one-third of the Democrats welcome such co-operation, and that two-thirds of the Democrats reject it. It will be reprehensible indeed if the opportunity shall fail to unite the political forces of the country solidly behind every effort to make the war victorious.

Movies for the army training camps, but the government has carelessly neglected to provide best girls to be taken to them.

A RECEPTION FOR MR. ROOT

The Mayor of New York has appointed a committee to arrange for public reception to Elihu Root when he returns to his home city. Some people are proposing that a special medal be struck and presented to Mr. Root in the name of the nation to commemorate his great services as chief of the American mission at Petrograd.

All this goes to prove that republics are not ungrateful. Yet, if it is desired to signalize Mr. Root's return to America in a manner befitting his merit, there is no need of committees or medals or public receptions. The finest greeting which Mr. Root can have is one which should come to him through the United States mails from the President of the United States in the form of a letter inviting Mr. Root to a seat in the Cabinet--either as Secretary of War, the post where he first won fame as an organizer and an executive under McKinley, or as Secretary of State, where he secured his greatest renown under Roosevelt.

It will be a great pity and a great loss to the country if Mr. Root is permitted to return home merely to render an account of his stewardship in Russia and then to take his splendid talents into the retirement of private life once more. Men like Root are needed in the administration today more than at any provious time in our history. Every one admirs his transcendent ability, everyone admits his unimpeachable patriotism, everyone knows his wide experience, his gifts of perception and expression, his sense of judgment and his undiminished capacity for work. In nearly every respect he is matchless in our public life.

In calling Mr. Root to counsel him, the President would demonstrate in fact what he has so often undertaken to express in words--that this war is a national undertaking, without partisanship or sectionalism.

SAVING GASOLINE

The president of the Standard Oil Co. calls for economy in the use of gasoline, the curtailment of joy-riding and like expedients to conserve the supply of oil, which, he says, is not equal to the demand. Mr. Bedford is a mossback. The law of supply and demand has been set aside by executive degree in this country. What business--the conduct of the war, every relation of life in fact--needs, according to the Democrats, is not the application of age-old laws and axioms, but legislation giving the President power to commandeer and to fix prices and to do all sorts of things that neverwere heard of before

Maryland has completed its quota of 30 Hospital Apprentice for the United States Navy, assigned sometime ago by the Bureaus of Navigation, and again has won commendation from the Navy Department.

There still is need, however, for additional men in this rating and the Maryland Recruiting Authorities at Baltimore have not slackened in their efforts to attract young men to this branch of the service.

Special attendion is called to the opportunities for advancement for Hospital Apprentices. They can easily proceed through the Pharmacist's Mate grade to the warrant rank of Pharmacist, receiving the pay, allowance and privileges of an Ensign.

Although every military unit in the State is calling for recruits and there is considerable rivalry among the various organizations, it is a great satisfaction to the authorities at Baltimore to note that Maryland manifests a perference for the Navy.

There never was a time when young men with the trade of a Machinists had better opportunities offered them than are offered in the Navy. There is an urgent need for Machinist's and those going into the Navy in this capacity are promoted as rapidly as their qualifications warrant.

Young men from the outlyinig sections of the State can expedite their enlistment in the Navy by securing proof of their citizenship before they appear before the recruiting authorities.

It should always be remembered that all minors entering the Navy must first procure the written consent of their parents or legal guardian. Forms for this purpose can be obtained from the nearest postmaster.

All other particulars of Navy enlistment can be obtained from the Postmasters of the State, directly from the Navy Recruiting Station, Calvert & Lexington Streets, Baltimore, or from the Navy Recruiting sub-station at Cumberland and Hagerstown.

Prices of many vegetables are going to smash in the Chicago market. wholesalers declared Tuesday. South Water street is flooded and smothered with luscious ripe tomatoes. Boxes of 22 pounds sold for 35 and 40 cents. The reason for the flood of tomatoes is the abnormally hot spell. They are ripening fast. Monday merchants were retailing baskets of tomatoes for 25 cents which today brought only 7½ cents. Cucumbers, which recently brought 15 cents each, retailed last week for five cents each and are now so plentiful that some dealers call them "penny goods."

CHILDREN'S CORNER

Dear Boys

You asked me to tell you what we saw, while we were down by the Ocean, outside of the ocean itself, was what the men call, the deep sea haul. We got up very early one morning, and went down the board walk and out to the far end of one of the largest piers. Not many visitors were there, only a few men, the fishermen were busy hauling in, what seemed to us an immense net, the greater part of it they pulled over the pier in the center dangling over the rail, were many hundreds of large, small, and numerous kinds of fish, flapping, gasping, trying to get back to life in the water. The fishermen were rapidly filling carts and wagons, of men near by, for sale; every little while they threw some fish back in the water which they said were not good for boys and girls to eat. I felt so sorry for the poor fish. I could not eat any during our stay. Good by for this time.

G.

In solitude I spend the lagging hours,
Pain, suffering and hunger are my lot:
Pain, weary pain, that ceases not,
And saps relentlessly my mortal powers
Of fortitude. Temptation off recurs
To leave this arduous course; one thing deters
And that omnipotent: the strength that God
Imparts so freely to the feet that plod
The hard and narrow way of Christ's own cause.
That strength enables me to firmer stand
Than ever in the cause of right: for laws
Of love 'gainst those of might. At this command
I turn again unwounded to the strife
'Gainst war, for love; nay more, 'gainst death for life.

—Lines written in an English prison by H. E. Stanton a young Friend under persecution for his conscientious objection to war.

NOT AT HOME

W'en trouble comes to whar I live,
En say he gwine ter stay,

These verses were sent to a sick lady with the picture of a jolly, laughing, little colored boy. They cheered her so, she passed them on to another "shut-in," and so on. We pass them on with their message of cheer. We do not know the author. —EDS.)

A CLEAN CHARACTER, ANYWAY.

A little fellow who had been brought up a staunch teetotaler was about to be apprenticed. The foreman offered him a glass of beer. The boy said, "I never drink that stuff."

"Hulloa, youngster," replied the foreman, "we have no teetotalers here."

"If you have me, you'll have one," said the boy.

The foreman was irritated, and holding up a glass of beer, he said, "Now, my boy, there is only one master, you'll either have this inside you or outside."

"Very well," said the boy. "You may spoil my jacket, but you shan't spoil my character."

HE HADN'T THOUGHT OF THAT

"THERE seems," said the prospective bridegroom, "to be a penalty for about everything except stealing a man't daughter."

"And," said the friend, 'do you think there isn't a penalty for that, too?"

"What is it?"

"Hard labor for life."

WHEN HE CROAKED

"Wont you croak for me, grandpa?" asked George.

"Croak? How do you mean?"

"Why—like a frog."

'But I can't croak." replied the astonished grandsire.

"Well, Dad said when you croaked he would get a good roll."

SHIFTLESS

"Them new neighbors is awful shiftless," said Elsie Elaine.

"Why so?" inquired her mistress.

"Every time I go to borrow something they ain't got it."

FINING SOUTHERN MANUFACTURERS

According to the Charleston News and Courier the Southern cotton mills are very much upset because of the proposed war tax "based on the profits now being made by the mills as compared with their earnings in three of the leanest years they have ever known, a period during which it was the exceptional mill that made anything at all, most mills being satisfied if they were able to keep going. Their contention Southern cotton mill is so low that when it does have a prosperous year its profits appear handsome indeed.

If these Southern cotton mills were unable three years ago to pay dividends on their low capitalization, the "peace and prosperity" rubbish which the Democratic campaigners dinned into their ears must have had a strange sound, and if, in spite of their lean years their operators voted to retain in power the party responsible for their dividend deficiencies, they are entitled to sympathy only for their gullibility. They were experiencing prosperity before the Democrats passed their deadly tariff law, describing which, the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association (a Southern organization) at its annual meeting in April, 1916, declared: the Wilson-Underwood tariff law has shown its "inefficiency as an income-producing measure, and has demonstarted that its schedules are unreasonably and ruinously low."

They are now to be fined for their ignorance.

His love for chickens once got Charles Harris of this county "in wrong." He again is in trouble. this time on account of another kind of chicken, according to information furnished the Advisory Board of Parole.

Harris was sent to prison for stealing chickens it was reported, and after serving part of his sentence was released on good behavior. After his release he secured a position at Camp Meade and then wrote a letter to the wife of a man whom he met in the Penitentiary, asking her to go down to Camp Meade with him.

The woman turned the missive over to the Parole Board and Monday the Board decided that Harris had violated the conditions of his parole and he has been summoned to appear before the board, where the question of his returning to the Penitentiary to serve out his unexpired term will be decided.
