June 5th 1885

Various duties have prevented my writing to you during the past few days, our last letters I think crossed each other. Last night I received the Mortgage for the payment of my interest in Sharp Street Store, and a letter from you enclosed with it, but you mention sending one from Joseph Wallis, which you request me to return, and this was not in the envelope. I thought the understanding was that the interest should be paid quarterly which would have been rather more convenient to me, but I believe interest on Mortgages are usually payable every six months.

Hall is very much for his wife. He has been very good, and was I believe the person who first discovered the fire and not Brooks as I thought. You with a crossed letter, as well Good bye Sally pointment and inconvenience to you not to have the use of him. I am very sorry that Joe Perot made some other arrangement about his animal, for if it was one that would have been quiet enough for the girls to drive it would have been a great thing for us. Now we have dependent upon the gentlemen. Every thing is looking very lovely here now, I wish you could see it, and Han too, as well as give us the pleasure of your company. You have no idea what an improvement the old flags are for the walks from the front door. We have not been able to complete the floor of the south porch yet, but expect to have it done next week, and this will I think be an equally great improvement. Cousin Emily and each of the girls as well as Harry and myself desire much love to Han and yourself and your boys. We did all of us enjoy your visits so very much. We have had another death in our neighborhood, but one that we have been expecting for
