My dear Gally

You see that I have come off, for a little mountain air! The girls forwarded your letter to me one day last week. I am truly sorry to find that Hen had been sick, and feel quite anxious to hear of further improvement in her condition. It had seemed a long time since we heard anything of you, the latest accounts before your letter were through Annie of Han's having gone to a German in a barn, and we hoped that she was feeling much better. You must miss the boys very much and really feel quite lonely. When do you think of coming down? But the girls think that this is the most delightful
