n.d. Galloway C. Morris Incoming Letters (Emily Hollingsworth) 1994

SIDE ONE

Wednesday. May 11th

Dear Gally. Thanks for your note of last evening. It was handed me when your father was by, so I read him about Mr Pool. He wishes we should have nothing to do with him. I have some information which I may be able to communicate to you in a few days, about a party, who has refused having any thing to do with Pool, but are men of Capital, this is all I can say, at present, except that I enter into no speculations whatever, nor wish to do so, without your & Israel's advice & consent. I have a horror of secret transactions always suspect there is something wrong in them. I was perfectly content your dear Father should go to Phila: as it may relieve his mind and if we stay here, shall always advocate his going, if he desires it. Yours lovingly. E. H

Dear Gally
Please look in my desk in my chamber & in a long, yellow Box you will find my Check Book, please send it to me by mail in an Envelope. There is also, a bunch of keys in the same box, one of which opens the lowest drawer of the bureau between the windows, where there is a small long, white box, containing Certificates of Drafts on Copenhagen for E. B. Dunant, take the latter (Feb. 17th I think,) out, as I shall be obliged to ask you or Eff Morris to get another Draft for her next week for 300 Kroner,
