n.d. Galloway C. Morris Incoming Letters (Emily Hollingsworth) 1994

SIDE TWO

are not a bother to you all, and to your dear father, in particular I, sometimes, feel anxious, lest my anxious temperament is not good for him, tho' I try to control it. I think from what he wrote to Mary, (your sister) yesterday, he intends to go to Newport with her, and the suggestion we should spend August at your house, met a most cordial approval from him & from me also, if dear Hannah would like it. We would have no objection to have Miss Shoester & Mary Gibson with us there, if Han pleased. They are both good women and Mary could assist in certain ways. Now your father wishes to take this to P.O., so I will conclude with much love to dear Han, the boys & yourself from your grateful to Roller & the Contract with him to mail to Roller to-day, so I hope that matter is settled. Your dear father seems rather better, Chester & Nellie have just come in, 9. A.M., & Chester had written a letter to you & offered to have my note put in his envelope, so I write, hastily, as Ches: must go in town in a few minutes. Love to dear Han & the boys & much to yourself from

Your grateful

Cos: Emily

I meant to write to you to-day, any way.
