n.d. Galloway C. Morris Incoming Letters (Emily Hollingsworth) 1994

SIDE TWO

"morning, as that will allow him
"time to consider about it.
So much for what your sister says to Polly. Now, I will copy part of his letter to me, rec'd to-day, bearing on the points of his condition and return home.
"I am as much at a loss what to do "with myself as ever — I am weak and "weary — I rose this morning to write "to you & Mr Cope and Galloway, having "taken the former first, found before I "got through with them, I must stop.
"I have now risen from a short nap & learn "that the boat is approaching. I can, then
"one only add what you do not require
"to be told, Do not be uneasy about me.
"I shall, probably, go from here on Wednesday,
"but, if I do not, I am very quiet here, and "that is what I need — If I do not leave
"here on Wednesday, I will write to you".
Now, dear Gally, you know all I do about your dear father & can judge what is possible or best for you to do.
With love to dear Hannah,
Your's lovingly
Cos: Emily
