ROPER WAVERING ON INSTALLMENT PLAN

In the opinion of Representative Charles E. Fuller of Illinois one of the greatest incentives to a large over-subscription to the Liberty Loan would be the passage of legislation authorizing the payment of income taxes in installments. Every day Senators aend Representatives are receiving telegrams and letters from concerns and individuals from all parts of the country urging the relief suggested by Mr. Fuller. Not only is the burden of paying all their Federal taxes in June preventing corporations from subscribing to the Loan, but the banks are having great difficulty in aiding their customers in the purchase of bonds by the deferred payment plan. Bills of Republican authorship having in view Mr. Fulder's scheme for the payment of taxes in installments have been pending in Congress for some weeks, but the leaders of the party in power have prevented their consideration. There are rumors that the Commissioner of Internal Revenue is looking more favorably on the proposed change in law, and Members who have a concern for the business stability of the country and the success of the Liberty Loan are hoping that the desired legislation may be an accomplished fact before it is too late.

CHILDREN'S CORNER

MY PONY

I have a little pony her name is Biddy; Daddy bought her at Mr. King's sale, her color is gray and white, and she has a pretty black face. She is only four years old but she is quite lively. Daddy has taken her to the farm to be tamed by the men who work on the farm. Someday I'll go to our school and take all the children a ride. When my pony gets back from the farm.

LETTER FROM SWITZERLAND

Do you children know, what makes the great Jung Frau Alp, shine like diamonds in the sunlight?

When it is summer in the valley below Hans and Gretchen are gathering flowers in their garden, they can see the "young wife" in her snow white dress always watching them. They love the pure white mountain and are sorry when heavy clouds come and hide her from their view.

The Swiss people call the houses in the mountains, chalets. The chalets are made of wood and often have beautiful carvings on the outside.

The chalet in which Hans and Gretchen live has a grape vine with bunches of grapes carved under all the windows. It also has many little balconies that are carved too. Sometimes these children eat their breakfast of bread and butter, honey cheese and goats milk on a litle table on one of the balconies, for the Swiss people love to eat out of doors. To get to the rooms on the record floor, one must go out on the porch, and up a quaint little winding stairway of carved wood, built at the side of the house. Hans is only nine years old, but he carves wood very well, and is proud to show you the bear with a match-box on its back, on, the cuckoo clock that he carved all himself. He also carved a tiny Swiss chalet that Gretchen said looked like a "really one."

The children use it for a playhouse. Next week will tell you what Gretchen does.

THE BIRTHDAY PARTY

By Mattie Watson Brown

Do you know what's a birthday, say?
My cousin had one, t'other day,
I went to help her have it, too,
And our baby, she went too,
And little Edgar, he's my other
Cousin, but I call him "brother,"
And Billy, too, and Martha Lee—
But they are not some kin tome.
Well, we just played most everything
A ring around-a-rosy ring,
And blindfold, too, and hide and seek,
(But Billy, he just had to "peek!")
Then, oh, the sweetest of it all,
Was when my auntie came to call,
And we just ran where we could see
A table by the apple tree,
All fixed up nice, as white as snow,
With piles of ice cream in a row!
Now guess what else? Ah, you can't think!
A big round cake, all white and pink,
And on the top two candles told
Elizabeth was two years old.
It was so good Oh, mercy me!
It was as good as it could be!
And when at last 'twas time to go,
We said, "Good-by and thank you so
For having such a nice birthday
An 'vitin' us to come and play."

DESCRIPTIVE

Tactful and delicate, even for a Frenchman, was the reply made by a Parisian who had not found "a life on the ocean wave" all for which one could wish. He was sinking, pale and haggard, into his steamer-chair when his neighbor cheerily asked: "Have you breakfasted, monsieur?" "No, m'sieur," answered the Frenchman with a wan smile," "I have not breakfasted. On the contrary!"

GALLANT BUT AWKWARD

A gallant but awkward young man, making his way through a crowded street car a few nights ago, his arms laden with parcels, accidently jostled a woman. He stopped to beg her pardon. As he bowed, a parcel fell from his arms and dropped on the woman's foot. He stopped to pick up the package, and the rim of his hat bumped her nose. He took off his hat and tried again. This time his head hit the broad brim of the woman's hat, tilting it south-by-southeast. She stepped backward, lost her balance, and fell into the lap of an elderly man. The gallant but awkward young man reached out a hand to assist her, caught a flimsy sleeve and tore it. "Better let her remain here, young man," remarked the elderly man kindly. "I'll take care of her until you get off the car."

NO RECTION IN CHAMP

From Washington we learn that friends of Speaker Champ Clark are urging him to become a candidate for the late Senator Stone's seat on the ground that thus a bitter factional contest may be averted in the Democratic party in Missouri. We are not sure that this ground is well taken. The President, for instance, can hardly refrain from applying in Missouri the "acid test" which he sought to apply in Wisconsin—and there will be Speaker Clark's opposition to the conscription law to furnish material for the reaction to the Presidential acid.

WHO LIED?

Either David Lawrence or George Creel is guilty of plain unvarnished falsehood. Lawrence gave circulation, in his daily syndicated letter, to a statement, evidently given to him by Creel, to the effect that no stenographer had taken down Creel's notorious speech thanking God for our unpreparedness and that Creel had been misquoted. Immediately thereafter the stenographer in question certified that he was employed as the official reporter of the convention of lecturers where Creel made his monumental break, that he personally took down and transcribed what Creel said and his notes were again transcribed to prove his statement. There was no reply to this. Trying to lie out of what Senator Penrose calls the smear of treason, Creel is caught with the goods.

NATIONAL CAPITAL CHAT

BEATS RHETORIC

"The appointment of Charles M. Schwab as director general of the Emergency Fleet Corporation was far more 'vocal' than any verbal explanation President Wilson could have made to a distressed public", declares J. J. Allen, advertising expert of the McGraw-Hill Co., New York City. "A day or two before the announcement of this appointment the New York Merchants' Association had asked the President to issue a message to the American people clarifying the shipbuilding situation and suggested that he come to New York to address a meeting on the subject. Mr. Wilson did not take kindly to the suggestion. He expressed the opinion that the people were much alive to the need for ships, that the country is vocal with the acknowledgement of the same need', and that nothing was so much talked about in Washington. He declined to issue a message, stating that his duty was to remain in Washington and help see that the shipbuilding program is carried through. But the message which he shortly afterward issued was far more virile and reasuring than any flight of rhetoric in which he might characteristically have indulged. If picayune jealousies are cast aside, Charles M. Schwab will put through the shipbuilding program in jig time, but the cost to the country of delaying this appointment can never be actually computed. We need more men like Charley Schwab in charge of war work.'

THE BIG PUMP-MAKER'S ADVICE

A distinct step in the direction of centralization of authority and a more efficient adimnistration of the production of aeroplanes is contained in a measure introduced by Representative Norman J. Gould of the State of New York. Mr. Gould proposes that the President shall, with the advice and consent of the Senate, appoint an Aircraft Administrator and five assistants, who shall have charge of the entire aero program of the Government. The aernautic sections of both the War and Navy Department are to be transferred to the new bureau, and all unexpended balances of appropriations made for them are to become available under the direction of the new administrator. Mr. Gould confidently believes that the organization mapped by him will do away with much of the conflict of authority now encountered in the production of aeroplanes, and greatly expedite the delivery of materials and the completion of machines.

MARINE NOTES

Atlanta, Ga. "Believe me, there isn't a Marine in France who wouldn't go through hell for General Pershing."

This is the grim and laconic manner in which the "Soldiers of the Sea" pay tribute to the American leader, according to a leter Mrs. W. M. Walten of this city received from her son, James who is a member of the Corps now fighting in France.

General Pershing has frequently praised the Marines on various inspection tours and has thereby endeared himself to the men of that service.

Square-heads" are what the Marines call the Germans, writes Private Walton who wears a sniper's medal.
