FUTURE OF THE AIRPLANE

The starting of regular airplane mail service from New York to Washington marks a new milespost in man's triumph over the forces of nature. The airplane of to-day is about where the automobile was along in the year 1905. In those days one could scarcely go out for a day with any probability of not being ingloriously towed home by a horse and wagon. Driving a motor in those days was regarded as a risky operation.

Air navigation of course meets infinitely greater difficulties than the automobile ever confronted. The airplane must keep going at a speed of 50 or more miles an hour, or it will drop to earth and bring death to its occupants. Even automobile science has never yet developed a motor that won't occasionally balk.

It seems improbable that within the life time of the present generation, any motor could be developed that could be absolutely relied upon to keep running. Of course by having several independent motors in a plane, the chances that all of them would go bad could be reduced to a low point.

But additional motors greatly add to the weight of a plane and complicate the problem of operation. It is always going to take a high degree of skill to navigate successfully among the treacherous air currents.

Airplane safety depends much on ability to make successful landings in case of engine trouble. In many situations suitable landing places could not be found as needed, and only a very skilful pilot could come down safely to such ground as was available. While aircraft will figure more and more in daily life, it is a long day before the planes will be practical for daily use like automobiles.

NAVY NOTES

Every time a new ship is launched, whether it be intended for the naval Service or to carry food and other necessities to the forces overseas, the need for men for the Navy is increased.

Very few ships pass through the war zone, or so called "barred area" without their complement of Naval Gunners, ready to protect their ship against attack by the Kaiser's under-sea murderers.

Since the declaration of war the Navy has grown to proportions little dreamed of by, even naval experts, in peace time and there is yet need for a large number of red-blooded young Americans for this branch of the service.

Nearly all the ratings are open in the Naval reserve and the best of the ratings in the regular Navy are not yet filled.

Men of the draft age can still enlist in the regular Navy or enroll in the Naval Reserve if they can furnish the recruiting authorities with a certificate that they are not needed for the current quota of their local draft board.

In some ratings in the regular Navy the term of enlistment is for the duration of the war only.

Full particulars of Navy enlistments can be obtained from the nearest Postmaster, directly from the Recruiting Station, Calvert and Lexington Streets, Baltimore, or from the Navy Recruiting Sub-stations at Cumberland and Hagerstown.

MARINE NOTES

Somewhere in France. Letter writing has become all the rage among the wounded U. S. Marines confined to the base hospitals here.

The reason is a French stenographer, a pretty one, too, who has volunteered to write letters home for her incapacitated American brothers.

The petite Parisiencnce makes a daily visit to the Marine hospitals for dictation—and the wounded devil dogs have suddenly become literary giants. They anxiously await her visits and fairly swamp her with mail.

"Gee, if I only had about three more aunts and six more cousins to write to," sighed one husky sea-soldier, as the pretty little "steno" moved on the next cot.

MODERN LEPERS

Representative John F. Miller of the State of Washington has given much time and study to the preparation of a bill for the control and prevention of diseases due to immorality. The measure is entitled "A Bill to Conserve and Increase the Industrial Man Power of the United States." The Public Health Service is charged with the administration of the proposed legislation, which deals with the evil in a way that will insure beneficial results if it is enacted into law. Mr. Miller proposes to establish internment hospitals for the observation and treatment of those afflicted, and to prevent diseased immoral persons from travelling from one State to another. Because of the latter provision the measure has been referred to the Interstate Commerce Committee of the House, from which a favorable report is looked for.

NO TIME FOR U. S. A.

A South Carolina Democrat recently tried to put through a bridge bill out of order, and by unanimous consent, on the plea that he had waited around all day for the purpose, and could not remain in the House any longer. "Should not the gentleman stay here a part of his time anyway," a Republican inquired. "No", was the Democrat's impudent rejoinder, "I think I could spend my time to much better advantage almost anywhere else. I have some work to do. I am supposed to take care of my district and represent it down in the Departments." In other words all of this Southern Congressman's time is occupied in getting special favors from the pliant Departmental officials for the voters back home. He has no idle moment to devote to national legislation. Such is the state of mind of many members of the party in power, although few have the temerity to admit the fact publicly.

J. B. DECIMATES HAWAII

Congressman C. Frank Reavis, of Nebraska, took a leading part in the passage of the prohibition bill for the Territory of Hawaii. Mr. Reavis has recently visited the Islands, and has talked personally with the natives. He states at the present time there is less than one-fourth the native population of the Islands there was in 1832. Mr. Reavis believes that the liquor traffic is largely responsible for that condition of affairs, and that we owe it to the Islands to remove the curse that we gave them when the United States introduced its civilization to the inhabitants. The effect of the Congresman's appeal to his colleagues was manifested in the vote by which the proposition was adopted by the House 238 to 40.

SEVEN-LEAGUE STRIDES

Has the Napoleon of the American Army been discovered? If the reward of meritorious service is promotfon, it would appear that he has, in the person of Bennett Clark, son of Speaker Champ Clark, the great opposer of the draft law. In the Washington Star of recent date we read that Speaker Clark had received word of the safe arrival in France of his son, Lieutenant Colonel Bennett Clark. From lieutenant to Lieutenant Colonel in less than nine months is certainly going some. At this rate he should rank with pershing in a very few months.

Bennett Clark is said to be about 28 years of age. When the draft law was before Congress his father fought it with all the bitterness of his tongue and influence. It was enacted, nevertheless, and then came the problem of taking care of Bennett. He was appointed to the first training camp for officers at Fort Meyer, within easy riding distance of his Washington Home, and with that marvelous energy which characterized his work in the House of Representatives as clerk at the Speaker's table, (salary $3,600 plus $1,000 for publishing the precedents, which were never published) he set out to learn the business of war and to command the United States Army. He graduated as a lieutenant in August, since which time his rise in the red firmament of war has been nothing short of meteoric Not one member of his camp class has made such a record at this. Those who were identified with the Republican party prior to their entrance into the army, are still humble lieutenant or captains, while those whose Democratic connections are not quite so notable must now yield precedence to Lieutenant Colonel Clark, Sir.

It is not reported whether the Lieutenant colonel was accompanied by the celebrated Houn' Dawg, panoplied as a War Pup to scent out "deserving Democrats" for orderly duty, but Champ Clark's militant Democratic speech at Fort Waynes the other day would indicate that in the war zone the dawg has found surcease from being kicked around. Possibly that to has been camouflaged as a bull purp. Oh. no! Political pull has nothing to do in this war of all the people to make it safe for Democrats!

TO CALIFORNIA THE GREATER GLORY

The refusal of Congress to recognize credits in the draft for volunteers already in the service is shown by Representative Randall of California to work outrage to his state; and doubtless it would be found that other States also are penalized for their prompt and patriotic response to the nation's need. California has credited men in the army and navy to the number of 68,205. She now has in Class One of the draft 58,666. Alabama has supplied 26,958 men to the army and navy and has 52, 815 men in Class One. Yet California, under the new law, will have to provide more men in the new draft than Alabama will, despite the fact that California has already contributed 41,247 more men to the forces than Alabama has. This is the problem upon which the President changed his mind. Alabama is probably glad that he did. But how about California's feelings?

COLLEGES COME THROUGH

Many colleges are having unusually early commencements this year in order that their students, both boys and girls, may have a long summer for useful war work; and they nearly all report engagements of that character. When the record of this year is finally made up it will be found, as in the case of the Civil War and the War with Spain, the colleges of the nation were drained of their men and women to make up the toll of labor and service which the cause of civilization required.

U. S. AMBASSADOR TO ENGLAND IS SURE OF SUCCESS OF DRIVE FOR $100,000,000

Walter H. Page, U. S. Ambassador to England, sent the following cablegram from the Embassy of the United States of America, in London, under date of May 14th, to H. P. Davison, Chairman of the War Council:

Dear Mr. Davison: I wish to take advantage of your visit in London to place on record my congratulation on the admirable work of the American Red Cross. The Formation of the London chapter rallied all Americans resident in this Kingdom and the work here has greatly expanded and has been wisely and enthusiastically carried out. As you know the most cordial relations have been established with the British Red Cross.

We all have the greatest pride, and rightly so, in the American Red Cross hospitals and in all the various activities under this organization. Its well directed energy plays no small part in the unbounded service demanded of all and so willingly given in these times and goes a long way in cementing mutual understanding between the peoples of the United States and the British Empire.

With heartiest wishes for every possible success in the forthcoming drive to which I am certain our people will gladly and generously respond,

Yours very sincerly,
(Signed) Walter H. Page.

The War Trade Board has limited the importation of crude rubber to 100,000 tons a year, and has instructed its Bureau of Imports for the current quarter to limit the issuance of licenses to a total of 25,000 tons up to June 31, 1918. Some changes may be made after experiences are gained by this three months' test. Imports of crude rubber during the previous year had been at the rate of 157,000 tons per annum, so the cut is over one-third.

The Red Cross has given and will give a comfort kit to every American soldier going into the trenches. The kits will contain a towel, shirt, writing paper and pencil, soap, handkerchief, socks, mirror and tobacco. These articles are much appreciated by the men as they add much to their comfort in the front line.

UNITED STATES POST OFFICE

Baltimore, Maryland,

May 24, 1918.

To the publisher of The American Sentinel.

Sir:-

By direction of the Attorney General of the United States you are requested to publish in each issue of your paper, from this date till the date of registration, and without charge, the following notice:

"All natives, citizens, denizens or subjects of the German Empire or of the Imperial German Government, being females of the age of 14 years and upwards, who are within the United States, and not actually naturalized as American citizens, are required to register as alien enemies at the Post Office from which they receive mail, between the dates of June 17th to 26th, 1918, both dates inclusive, between the hours of 6 A. M. and 9 P. M. This registration at Post Offices applies to nonurban districts only and does not apply to Baltimore City, Annapolis, Cambridge, Cumberland, Frederick, Frostburg, Hagerstown and Salisbury, where other places of registration are named by the respective Chief Registrars for those cities.

"Persons required to register should understand that in so doing they are giving proof of their peaceful dispositions and of their intention to conform to the laws of the United States.

"Each registrant is required to furnish four unmounted photographs of herself, not larger than 3 by 3 inches in size, on thin paper, with light background. All four photographs should be signed by the registrant across the face of the photographs, so as not to obscure the features, if the applicant is able to write.

"Three blank forms of registration affidavit must be completely filled out by the registrant or her representative and must be produced by the registrant personally to the registration officer (the local Postmaster) and be signed and sworn to by the registrant in the presence of and before the said registration officer.

"The registrant is hereby informed that she must again present herself before the registration officer who took her oath after 10 days but before 15 days from the last day fixed for registration in her registration district to obtain a registration card.

"An alien enemy required to register who shall, after the date fixed for the issuance to her of a registration card, be found within the limits of the United States, its Territories or possessions, without having her registration card on her person, is liable to all the penalties prescribed by law."

Respectfully,
SHERLOCK SWANN,
Postmaster, Chief Registrar for Nonurban Areas of Maryland.

Somewhere in France.—Jimmy, the ant eater, is a causualty! Jimmy is the mascot of the—th. Regiment, U. S. Marines and he eats everything but ants.

Jimmy journey from Vera Cruz with the Marines and when he arrived in the front line trenches, Jimmy was happy—here was real action!

But the screeching shells and bursting bombs soon lost their terror for Jimmy and trench life was beginning to pall on him when the attack came.

A huge trench rat, resenting Jimmy's intrusion, charged. They locked in deadly combat. Seeing he was being worsted, the rat tail-signaled for reinforcements and the Rat Reserves came to the battle line in close formation for massed attack.

Then the Marines stepped in and ended the battle. They found Jimmy had lost sundry pieces of hide and his sunny disposition.

He was given an immediate furlough and recommanded for a wound stripe.

Information regarding the hospitals of the United States, in process of compilation since 1916, is now collated and indexed in the medical section of the Council of National Defense. A central bureau of information concerning the hospital facilities of the country, under war conditions, is thus provided. The data will be kept up to date from month to month. This bureau has not only the details of over 1,000 active hospitals, but is also gathering full data concerning nearly 8,000 other instiutions, which include sanatoria, infirmaries, homes, asylums, and dispensaries.

The British meat shortage is being felt more severely than at any time since war was started. That the shortage is not confined to meats, however, is shown by the fact that effective control of the milk supply is already being considered, in order to meet a possible greater shortage later in the year, and that some sections of English labor are favoring extensions of the compulsory rationing system to Bread, cheese, and tea.

There are now 20 uniforms for women in war work in the United States. They are for munition workers, telephone and radio operators, yeomen, employees of Shipping Board and the Food Administration, Red Cross workers, Y. M. C. A. workers, Woman's Motor Corps, Girl Scouts, and students of the National Service School of the Woman's Naval Service.

The War-Winning quartette is wheat, meat, sugar, and fat. They are needed abroad; don't impose too much home performance upon them.
