Murray family letters

boys are as lovely as ever. of course I only think it necessary that the young lady in question should see Murray & know him a little to come into the management I am anxious for. Sally looks very well. She is sleeping with Mary now. I had the pleasure of sitting up to him this morning while he hurried through his breakfast in order to be in time for school. and I begged Murray privately before I left not to make any engagement for any evening this week as I know that Ally is to take tea at Mr Bohlen's this or to-morrow evening. She is prepared to be fascinated. I find myself as I get older getting anxious to see my young friends settled early in life, and I really think it would be a wise thing to send Sally on to attend Mr. Brooks lectures. they are so admirable. He is as fresh a Brooksite as ever. and I am sure would do all she could to bring the young people together. He has been several times to Mr Bohlen's lately & if there were a young lady staying there would not mind going often.

Did you hear that Polly had a short letter from Mary Morris telling her she had had a letter from her brother Charles in N.Y. who had heard from Mrs Baxter on her way from Warrenton some weeks ago that our friends were "all well and all at-home". I suppose she meant
