A PARTY ISSUE

Washington, June 3. The Republican Publicity Association, through its President, Hon. Jonathan Bourne, Jr., today gave out the following statement from its Washington Headquarters:

"No party has the right to appropriate this issue, declared the President referring to the league of nations in his New York speech of March 5th,' and no party will in the long run dare oppose it.' But since its inception the Republican party has been championing every issue that had for its purpose the perpetuation of constitutional government and the guaranteeing of the rule of the people rather than that of indfviduals. In the Civil War it was the Republican party that rallied to the defense of the Union under the leadership of Lincoln, elected to the White House by Republican votes, and preserved the United States as the great entity foreseen by the fathers of the country. In the Spanish war it was the Republicans again, this time headed by the martyred McKinley, who upheld our traditions and brought the Nation safely to a victorious peace. In the industries of peace, likewise, it has been under the wise guidance of national Republican leaders, reflected in beneficent tariffs and other stimulating legislation, that the wealth of America has been developed and made available for our people and the world.

"When the elections were held last November the voters knew that the war was about to close. They were aware of the fact that the men they were to send to the Sixty-sixth Congress would have to deal not only with military and industrial demobilization and other problems of reconstruction, but would be called upon to pass judgment upon the treaty of peace with Germany and probably upon a covenant for a league of nations, forecast by the President when he gave his Fourteen Points to the world. With that knowledge in mind the people went to the polls and deliberately overturned the Democratic majorities in both Senate and House, and placed the Republicans in control. It is incumbent upon the party that has been handed the reins of legislation to carry out the will of those by whose mandate it is now in power. The Republicans have the necessary votes in both Houses, and nothing need be enacted that does not have their approval. Hence if the league of nations meets with defeat, it will be because the Republicans decreed it, and their act will be as much an expression of party policy as anything that ever transpired in Congress.

"The Republicans are not going to permit the Democrats, through their President or other wise, to deprive them of the glorious opportunity now presented to prove themselves once more the bulwark against encroachment upon our liberties. They have shown no hesitancy in accepting the responsibilities assigned them by the voters; in fact their assumption of the role of Defenders of the Nation is really automatic. Senator Poindexter correctly states the case when he says, 'If the bulk of the Republican Members of the Senate were opposed to this covenant of the league of nations and a majority of the Democrats were in favor of it, it would automatically become a party question.'

"The signing of the Second Declaration of Independence by thirty-nine Republicans of the Senate, in which they decreed the death of the league covenant unless it was separated from the treaty and materially amended, is further proof that the issue is in fact a party question. The truth is the Republicans are in power; they have ample votes to defeat the league; they intend to cast those votes in line with their traditional policy of unequivocal Americanism; and when all is over they are going to claim the glory of having achieved a greater victory with patriotic logic than they ever won in the past by the sword—a claim that will be ungrudgingly granted by a grateful people.

CARROLL COUNTIANS ATTEND BIG MEETING AT MARYLAND STATE COLLEGE

The Farmers' Day at the Maryland State College was attended by a large gathering of farmers from all sections of the state. It is estimated that the crowd exceeded six thousand. The Carroll county delegation numbered about 150, some thirty-five cars carried the Carroll banner.

One of the features of the day was the cultivator demonstration. A number of prominent farm implement makers exhibited machines. The tractor cultivators attracted considerable attention as well as did the two row cultivators. The International tractor cultivator, and the Moline were on the job and did good work. The two row horse cultivators made by John Deere, Iron Age, and international proved to the farmers that they were loosing considerable time by using small cultivators.

Friday was also Commencement Day. A large class received their diploma. A number of prominent speakers were present and inspiring addresses were made.

The workers in the College and Extension Service deserve much praise for the way they carried on the work through the war and have taken up the reconstruction work. It is up to the Maryland farmers to get back of the College to use every effort and give it all the support they can to make it rank with the leading Agricultural Colleges in the country.

THRESHER SCHOOL

The men who have threshing rigs will be given an opportunity to go to school for one day only. The Farm Machinery specialist, F. A. Wirt, of the Maryland State College, will conduct a one-day school for the benefit of the threshers of Carroll county and neighboring counties, in Westminster, June 18th.

The farmers will find it not only interesting but profitable to be present. As much as fifteen bushel was saved per day last year when proper methods were used. As threshing is done on a contract plan per bushel this was profitable to threshermen as well as the farmers. Everybody interested should make every effort to be present.
