The meeting was conducted by Rev. H. C. Owens. After the business was transacted an enjoyable program was very much appreciated, consisting of temperance songs and readings. After the program a very pleasant social hour was spent. Some very beautiful and humorous records were rendered on the victrola. "Uncle Josh," told some of his experiences at, "Pumpkin Center," which kept the audience in a state of merriment and made them forget that midnigat was approaching. Delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. Buckingham assisted by her mother and sisters. Everybody spent a most delightful evening. The place of the next meeting will be announced later.

Mrs. Harvey Shipley, son of Mrs. Ella Shipley, had the misfortune to have the horse he was riding slip on the state road, and fall on him, breaking his ankle. His many friends will be very glad to know he is improving and we wish him a speedy recovery and hope he will soon be able to walk again.

TELEPHONE PROPERTIES ARE RETURNED TO-DAY.

After a year of Federal control, the telephone property which makes up the Bell Telephone System is returned to its owners by the United States Government.

While the property has been properly maintained it is not the same property which the Government took over on August 1, 1918, It is not as adequate for its job or as well-manned as it was; that it is not is in no way the fault of Federal control, which was eminently fair. It is due to causes for which neither the Government nor the Company is to blame.

A year ago today we were at war. labor and material needed for both telephone operation and construction were turned to militarv uses. Some materials were so vital to the carrying on of the war that even the work of providing telephone facilities for the Government was retarded and no part of them could be spared for commercial telephone purposes.

No less vital was the Government's need for those skilled to create, maintain and operate the vast intercommunication system necessary in modern warfare and in the conduct of the vastly increased Government services.

Thousands of telephone men were already at the battle front. Thousands more were under arms and still telephone experts and skilled operators went into the service of the Government and its tributary industries by the tens of thousands.

The reserve of plant and equipment was drawn upon until it was entirely used up and the experiened staff was gradually depleted. To find others to take the places of those who had gone was difficult. To train them takes time.

During the year came victory and the armistice; and instantly the business world sprang into intense activity. The demand for telephone service passed all former records. To replace the exhausted reserve which had been carried for just such purposes and to replace the skilled forces to meet this unprecedented emergency there began a rush for construction, for readjustment, for high pressure repairs, for feverish extensions. All these must be continued with increasing effort.

The return of the property comes in the very midst of this race between an overpowering demand and an upbuilding of a system whose growth was held back and whose forces were stunted by the vital needs of war.

Much progress has been made in the upbuilding of this system but far more is still required to meet the swift growth of business; and also to give "first aid" to every other business or every other service struggling against an unprecedented demand.

Prosperity which creates this emergency in service creates also a scarcity of those desiring employment in the service. Under such conditions telephone service generally has not been and could not be up to the pre-war standard. It is beyond human power to immediately overcome the handicap which the situation imposes.

There are no people in any public or private endeavor who are working more tirelessly or strenuously for the common good than those of the telephone company. Service has always been given. More of it must be improved. That improvement in some cases will take months. Eventually service must win the race with demand.

Also the bosses that do not recognize and reward hard work and ability, very often get a chance to do several men's work without assistance.

Poet Edwin Markham wrote some melancholy lines on "The man with the hoe", but but others are irresistibly impelled to bust into more cheerful verse on seeing the girl next door in her sweet garden costume.
